Dead in South Africa as Blacks Protest on Language

F. BURNS
Special to The New York Times
Johannesburg, June 16—A police officer was killed today in a riot during a week of protests in South Africa against compulsory teaching of Afrikaans.
The deaths came only a week before the South African Prime Minister, John Vorster, is scheduled to meet with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in West Germany. Apartheid will be on the agenda of the talks, which South African officials have described as the country's most important diplomatic encounter in decades.
Mr. Vorster had no immediate comment, but a prominent black leader, the Very Rev. Desmond Tutu, Anglican Dean of Johannesburg, said that black leaders "have been warning the Government about something like this happening for a long time."
More than 70 people were injured, 19 with bullet wounds, when the riot erupted in the black township of Soweto, 10 miles from Johannesburg. It continued from midmorning until after dusk, with army units standing ready to intervene. The area was sealed off to whites.
Reports were sketchy and conflicting, but witnesses spoke of mobs of students attacking government buildings, trains and buses. At least one school was destroyed by fire, and several official vehicles were overturned and burned.
It was the worst riot between the races in South Africa since the Sharpeville massacre on March 21, 1960, when police fired on a crowd of more than 5,000 demonstrating black Africans, killing 72 and wounding more than 170.
At 9 P.M., the national radio broadcast a statement asserting that the situation was "completely under control."

MAJOR SEGMENTS OF THE ECONOMY EXPANDED IN MAY

Industrial Output, Personal Income and New Housing Are All Reported Higher

By EDWIN L. DALE Jr.
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, June 16—Industrial production, personal income and housing starts all rose in May as the expansion of the economy continued. Government reports disclosed today.
Housing construction, however, continued to be one of the few sluggish sectors, mainly because the cost of new homes has risen much faster than average incomes. At an annual rate of 1.42 million units in May, housing starts were slightly above the April level of 1.38 million units but not so high as in February and March.
The Commerce Department reported that the United States balance of payments on current account swung, as expected, into modest deficit in the first quarter of 1976, after a strong surplus all through 1975. (Page 49.)
Building permits for new construction continued to indicate a gradual recovery in housing, however. Permits were at an annual rate of 1.16 million in May, up from the April level of 1.1 million and the highest level since the recovery began in the spring of last year.
Industrial Production Up
The Federal Reserve Board said industrial production in May—a broad gauge of the economy—rose by a further 0.7 percent, although April output was revised slightly downward.
The May increase was the 13th monthly rise in succession since the recession "low" was reached in April of last year, for a total rise of 12 percent, though industrial production remains below its peak of September 1974.
The report said that output in both April and May was "held down somewhat by the strike in the rubber industry."
Apart from rubber, the report said, "growth in output was widespread among product groupings again in May." Apart from autos, where production held steady, there were increases in output of consumer durable home goods and consumer nondurables, business equipment, steel and nonferrous metals.
Output of construction products declined and production of nondurable materials, which had risen steeply at the outset of the recovery, "increased at a slower pace," the report said.
The production index for May was 123.2, with 1967 taken as 100, up from a revised index of 122.3 in April.
Personal income in May continued its strong and steady rise, reflecting above all the healthy gain in total employment that has accompanied the expansion.
The increase in income in May was at an annual rate of

KILLERS UNKNOWN Ford Says Slayings Won't Halt Search for a Settlement

By JAMES M. MARKHAM
Special to The New York Times
BEIRUT, Lebanon, June 16—Francis E. Meloy Jr., the newly arrived American Ambassador to Lebanon, and his economic counselor were shot to death today along with their embassy driver.
The 59-year-old diplomat, a former Ambassador to Guatemala and the Dominican Republic, was reportedly taken from his car and shot in the head and chest and left at a garbage dump by the sea.
Also shot to death and left at the garbage dump were Robert O. Waring, the embassy's economic counselor, and the Ambassador's Lebanese driver, Zohair Moghrabi, according to reliable American and Lebanese sources.
[In Washington, the White House announced the killings and President Ford said that "The United States will not be deterred from its search for peace by these murders." Page 16.]

U.S. to Sell Kenya 12 F-5's In $70 Million Arms Deal

By BERNARD WEINRAUB
Special to The New York Times
NAIROBI, Kenya, June 16—The United States has agreed to sell 12 F-5 jet fighter planes to Kenya in one of the biggest single American arms deals in Africa, according to senior United States officials.
The agreement, which needs Congressional approval, was discussed today by Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld and James S. Gichuru, Kenya's Defense Minister.
United States officials estimated the cost of the fighter bombers at $70 million to $75 million.
Officials said after the meeting that an agreement "in principle" was reached and that a United States Air Force team would visit Nairobi later in the month to work out the details and delivery dates.
In agreeing to sell the planes

Bank of England Linking Oil Nations to Pound Drop

By PETER T. KILBORN
Special to The New York Times
LONDON, June 16—The Bank of England identified the leading oil-producing countries to what has day as the likely agents behind the year-long decline of the British pound.
By reducing oil revenues payable in sterling, liquidating investments in Britain and reducing the sterling amounts held in their official reserves, members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries contributed to heavy pressures on the British currency, a routine bank report showed.
Britain's central bank spelled out the details in the tables, graphs and financial varnacular of its quarterly statistical bulletin. Although the figures are

Levi Believes the Courts Try to Heed Busing Law

By LESLEY OELSNER
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, June 16—Attorney General Edward M. Levi said today that he thought the Federal courts had tried to follow the 1974 law that calls on the courts to order busing in school desegregation cases only as a last resort.
"His statement sharply contrasts with the repeated assertions of President Ford that if the courts would follow the law, the so-called Esch Amendment, they would not have to impose 'forced busing,'" Mr. Levi, holding his first news conference in a year, also said that he did not think that the Supreme Court should "go back" on its earlier rulings on school desegregation and busing.
He portrayed the Justice Department's current theories and initiatives regarding busing as attempts to continue the development of the law on busing, rather than to modify earlier rulings.
The Attorney General's statement that the Court should not "go back" and his description of the department's efforts as attempts to "continue" rather than modify Supreme Court case law, contrast with the impression given by recent Presidential and White House statements.
On May 26, for example, Mr. Levi told Ohio reporters, "We believe that at least possibly the Supreme Court will review its previous decisions and possibly

SENATE EXTENDS ENERGY AGENCY

Votes to Make Major Oil Companies Disclose Some of Costs and Profits

By EDWARD COWAN
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, June 16—The Senate approved today and sent to conference with the House a bill to continue the Federal Energy Administration and require major energy companies to disclose costs and profits for major functions, such as oil production or refining.
The Senate wrote into the measure amendments authorizing Federal subsidies and loan guarantees for energy conservation efforts by home owners, business and state and local governments.
However, it seems unlikely that the House will go along with these provisions because House and Senate conferees have been deadlocked on similar provisions in another bill that would establish mandatory energy efficiency standards for new buildings.
The energy agency is scheduled to expire at midnight June 30. Congress expects to send the extension bill to President Ford before the deadline. He is expected to sign it.
Pro-oil senators won strong

2 Nurses Are Accused in Deaths At Michigan Veterans' Hospital

By United Press International
DETROIT, June 16—Two nurses were arrested today on first degree murder charges relating to last summer's mysterious series of deaths at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Ann Arbor, Mich., the Federal Bureau of Investigation said.
Jay E. Bailey, acting special agent in charge of the Michigan F.B.I. office, identified the suspects as Filipina B. Narciso, 30 years old, of Ypsilanti, Mich., and Leonora M. Perez, 31, a former Ann Arbor resident who now lives in Evanston, Ill.
Mr. Bailey would not comment on any possible motive for the slayings. Little was

Kuhn Holds Up Sale of A's Stars

By JOSEPH DURSO
Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn ordered a hearing yesterday on the mass sale of stars by the Oakland A's. He ordered the players not to change sides until he had investigated the new issues raised by the money "revolution" sweeping the sport.
The commissioner acted less than 24 hours after the Oakland team had beaten the major leagues' trading deadline with the biggest auction of talent in baseball history. The A's sold Vida Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million and Joe Rudi and Rolie Fingers to the Boston Red Sox for $1 million apiece, two months after having traded Reggie Jackson and Ken Holtzman to the Baltimore Orioles.
As a result, Charles O. Finley in effect dismantled the club that had won the last five Western Division championships in the American League and three straight World Series from 1972 through 1974.
And the Yankees and Red Sox, two of the wealthiest teams, bought some of the highest-priced—and still-undisputed—players on the market.
The sudden flow of talent to the two powerhouse teams of the American League's East provoked some club owners to protest that such sales

Beame Deputy Hints At Aid for City U.

By JUDITH CUMMINGS
Deputy Mayor John E. Zuccotti said last night that the city might be able to find the $15 million the City University needs to meet its June payroll, but would not do so until the university submitted a plan showing how it intended to close a $48 million budget gap for the fiscal year that begins July 1.
Officials of the city have been critical of the university for allegedly failing to make the economies that both the city and the university need to stay within tightened budgets.
Mr. Zuccotti's statement was the firmest move so far by a city administration that is

South African policemen in Soweto remove the body of a white Government official who, according to a witness, was hacked to death by an angry mob.

6 Dead in Black Township in South Africa

However, the statement, by Minister of Justice James T. Kruger, appealed to the residents of Soweto to "remain calm and not hinder the police" in their attempts to restore calm.

The statement hinted that conditions in the township remained volatile. It said the police were still attempting to separate the students from one another and prevent further violence.

Soweto, a sprawling township of 700,000 people, is the most populous urban concentration in southern Africa. Despite its nearness to Johannesburg, it is as separate from it as apartheid can make it.

At midnight, a Johannesburg resident living near the township reported that he could still hear sporadic gunfire. He said that the night sky was lit up by fires. However, there was no word of military intervention.

The trouble began when the students gathered to protest a government regulation requiring the use of Afrikaans as the language of instruction for some subjects in the township's schools. The regulation has provoked sporadic student strikes for a month, with up to 2,000 pupils boycotting classes.

The students complained that the regulation required them to cope with a third language, in addition to English and the African language most of them speak as a mother tongue. But the strikes had broader political overtones since Afrikaans is the language of South Africa's ruling Nationalist Party, the architect of apartheid.

Last week, there were isolated incidents of violence with a police car set on fire and a teacher stabbed. Today's march started peacefully, but when the students converged on Phelani Junior High School, scene of the earlier trouble, they found their path blocked by 300 policemen.

Accounts of what followed varied. Mr. Kruger said that the police had opened fire "with warning shots" after two boys, aged 6 or 7, was hit.

government officials were "hacked to death" by the students. He said the officials were pulled from their vehicles, which had been overturned along with a dozen others.

Describing the scene immediately before the gunfire, the minister said the students "were aggressive, shouted inflammatory slogans, carried banners and attacked and stoned police as well as private vehicles."

He said that two vehicles from the West Rand Bantu Administration Board, the government agency that oversees Soweto, were overturned and one white and one black man were hacked to death.

"Two police dogs were hacked to death and set on fire," he went on. "Ten police vehicles were damaged and set on fire."

In a radio interview later, he added: "Of course some shots were fired. But the police used as little force as possible."

A reporter for The Johannesburg World, a newspaper aimed at black readers, gave a somewhat different account. The reporter, Sophie Tema, said that the students were approaching the school, singing black nationalist songs, when police vehicles pulled up.

According to Miss Tema, most of the policemen were black, but only the white officers were armed, two with sub-machine guns and the rest with revolvers. Their arrival provoked taunts from the students, which led one policeman to throw a tear-gas grenade. In return, the students began throwing rocks and other objects, she said.

The reporter said that the police had given no warning to the students to disperse. Once the rock-throwing began, a white policeman pulled out his revolver, pointed it and fired, she said. Other policemen followed suit, and one student, hit in the chest, fell to the ground.

Under fire, the students started running, throwing more rocks as they went, Miss Tema's account continued. The police continued firing, and a second boy, aged 6 or 7, was hit.

A report in the Johannesburg Star, based on the accounts of witnesses, said that at least 300 rounds had been fired. It also said that the two children died of "multiple injuries," including bullet wounds. The photograph in The World appeared to show the dead child with a bullet wound in the head.

The accounts indicated that the students attacked indiscriminately after the shootings. Trains were mobbed in the Phelani Station, causing a temporary suspension of service to Johannesburg. Bus service was cut off after more than a dozen buses were commandeered, and 40 more had their windshields smashed.

Looting and arson was widespread. One fire engine had to turn back when its black crew was menaced; white crews of other service vehicles abandoned the area. At the Baragwanath Hospital, where most of the injured were taken, officials sent white doctors and nurses home.

Confusion over the death toll continued into the evening. The South African Press Association, reporting eight dead, appeared to be relying on witnesses' accounts.

In addition to the two students and two officials cited in the accounts of Mr. Kruger and Miss Tema, there were descriptions of an elderly black man hit by a stray bullet, and of a third child who died on the way to the hospital in Soweto. There was also a report of a white official dying on the way to a hospital in Johannesburg, though it was not clear whether he was one of the officials mentioned by Mr. Kruger.

In Soweto Township, Living Is a Mixture of Privilege and Passes

Special to The New York Times
JOHANNESBURG, June 16 — Soweto, the sprawling black township where several people died in rioting today, is the most populous urban concentration in southern Africa. Yet, a motorist driving there from Johannesburg, 10 miles away, finds no signpost to indicate the way.

The lack of direction is no oversight. Although it is home to more than 700,000 people, many of them working in the houses, factories and mines of Johannesburg, Soweto lives an existence that is largely unknown to many of the city's 500,000 whites.

Soweto, a black township, was torn by rioting.

The separation of the two communities is as complete as the laws of apartheid can make it. Blacks who have passes can work in Johannesburg, but only 120,000 are allowed to live there, mostly in the servants' quarters attached to white homes. Whites wanting to visit Soweto also need permits and a persuasive reason for going.

About 15,000 whites visit the township annually on the twice-daily tourist buses run by the West Rand Bantu Administration Board, the Government agency that supervises the township's affairs. But a white grandmother who has lived in the rich suburb of Houghton all her life confessed the other day that neither she nor her husband had ever been there.

The township lies on the gently rolling scrubland veld, a few miles beyond the first of the gold mines that gave Johannesburg its start 90 years ago. Consisting mostly of cramped bungalows on unpaved streets, it sprawls for nearly 35 square miles, half again as large as Manhattan.

Yet, from the observation deck of the South African Broadcasting Corporation's transmission tower in central Johannesburg, nearly 500 feet up, it is almost always invisible. On clear days, at noon, the eye catches the glint of the corrugated roofs. But it is usually obscured in a thick pall of smoke from the coal and wood stoves in the bungalows.

homes have electricity. More, perhaps 50 percent, have cold running water, but only 15 percent have inside bathrooms. In the average house, six or seven persons live in just under four small rooms.

In the winter, even with the stoves, many complain about the cold.

Shopping is a major problem. Government regulations permit no stores other than those that sell food and kitchen requirements. For anything else, shoppers must travel into Johannesburg. There are complaints that local groceries exploit their clients.

There are municipal beer halls selling a watery beer produced in Government breweries, but no liquor. Many Sowetans, however, prefer to take their custom to the illegal shebeens, speak-easies where home-brewed beer or bottled liquor can be quaffed in low-lit comfort. Raids on the shebeens are frequent, and fines for their customers are stiff.

Crime of a more violent sort is a pervasive problem. Every Monday, Johannesburg newspapers chronicle the Soweto murders of the weekend. In a recent example, a man dressed as a doctor walked into the local hospital and fired six bullets into a patient; in another, students stoned a rapist to death after he had attacked their teacher.

For all of the inconveniences, living in Soweto is a privilege since under the pass law, no black has a permanent right of residence in a township. The pass he is required to carry can be canceled for a minor infraction, and not infrequently it is. In that event, he has only 72 hours to leave the township and return to his tribal homeland.

Nor can anybody own land in the township. A black can rent a plot and build his own house, as a minority of well-to-do Sowetans have done. Even then, the best he can get is a 30-year leasehold, a recent innovation that the government is threatening to make contingent on the tenant's taking homeland citizenship, thereby renouncing his claim to be a South African.

Consent by Government
 For millions of blacks living in the homelands, getting to Soweto in the first place is not easy. They must first have approval and a job to go to. Many who work in the factories and mines leave their families behind in the homelands and live in barrackslike hostels. After 15 years of steady employment, 10 of them with a single employer, they can get on the waiting list for houses.

The restrictions derive from one of the first principles of apartheid, which holds that the urban black is there by consent of the Government and on a temporary basis only. In theory, he belongs to one of the nine homelands and must seek his rights there. The homelands, the areas first settled by the African tribes, amount to 13 percent of the country by area, against a black proportion of more than 70 percent in the population at large.

On the Government tour, officials point proudly to the effort that has been made to improve conditions in the township.

Today the Township has 256 schools, a 3,000-bed general hospital, another hospital specializing in endemic eye diseases and 55,000 cars. It also has a golf course, 3,000 soccer teams, and its own "millionaires row," a street called Pioneer Avenue where successful lawyers, doctors and businessmen have built ranch-style homes that would fit into any prosperous American suburb.

Officials point out that the public services are heavily subsidized. One example, the general hospital, is said to cost more than $16 million a year, with revenue of less than $500,000 from patients, who pay 65 cents a visit. However, unlike white children throughout South Africa, black school children pay fees.

As today's riot indicated, it is an environment that breeds acute resentment against apartheid, and the Government that maintains it, but white Americans are often struck by the warmth of their reception and compare it favorably with the welcome they could expect in a predominantly black area at home.

"When you walk down the street in Soweto, everybody smiles and bids you welcome," said a recent American visitor. "I can't remember the last time that happened to me in Harlem."

and Sees a Wider War in Rhodesia

New York Times
June 16—The British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Anthony Crosland, today accepted majority rule in the country, "bloody" ending the United States' support of the Union and so before it is too late," he added.

He warned that the "prospects for a negotiated settlement are receding" and that if the principle of majority rule was not "conceded quickly" the outlook for peace was "desperately bleak."

A Foreign Office spokesman said later that Mr. Crosland did not mean that he foresaw United States marines rushing to Salisbury to bail out a white minority regime. But if the Soviet Union became involved, he said, the Americans would obviously be concerned about changes in the global balance of power and would seek to counteract them. He would not speculate on what sanctions the United States might take.

Mr. Crosland said that he saw no point in restarting negotiations unless Rhodesia accepted the principle of majority rule.

Botswana's Open Border
OTTAWA, June 16 (UPI)—Sir Seretse Khama, President of Botswana, said yesterday he would not take up the United States on its pledge to assist countries that close their borders to Rhodesia because such a move would mean "economic suicide" for his country.

Speaking before the Canadian House of Commons and the Senate External Affairs and Defense committees, Sir Seretse said the lifeline of the Southern African nation was its rail link with Rhodesia.

He said that he believed closing the border would not solve the Rhodesian problem because the Government of Prime Minister Ian Smith "does not need the Botswana line for its survival."

8 Slain in Guerrilla Clash
SALISBURY, Rhodesia, June 16 (AP)—Two more white Rhodesian soldiers and four black nationalists have been killed in Rhodesia's guerrilla war, the Government announced today.

Eight black civilians have also been slain by security forces, a communiqué said. It added that four of them were actively involved in assisting the guerrillas.

U.S. Agrees to Sell Kenya 12 F-5 Planes

...ate to African nations," Mr. Rumsfeld said at a luncheon with senior Kenyan officials. "Just as we believe in freedom and self-determination for ourselves, so too we believe that no alien power should dictate policy on this continent."

"The destiny of Africa must lie in African hands," he said. Reporters were told today that the Kenyans were seeking 10 F-5E's, which are single-seat fighter bombers, and two F-5F's, two-seat planes that can be used for training. Officials declined to speculate about the delivery date for the aircraft but said that it was unlikely the planes would arrive this year in Kenya. Any military program over $25 million must be submitted to Congress for approval.

The agreement with Kenya is one of the single largest United States arms sales to an African nation, according to Pentagon officials. It ranks with the sizable American commitment to Ethiopia, whose 45,000-man armed forces have been supplied by the United States since 1953. United States military assistance to Ethiopia amounts to more than $220 million in grants, while a recent sales agreement was signed for $200 million.

Kenya, which has an armed force of only 7,300, one of the smallest in Africa, has paid scant attention to defense partly because of education and other social priorities and partly because President Jomo Kenyatta has been fearful of developing a powerful military force that could pose a threat to his dominance.

What sparked Kenya's arms discussions with the United States, as well as with Britain, the traditional supplier, and Germany and France, is growing external pressures from two neighbors, Uganda and Somalia.

Somalia, with Soviet military aid of $132 million, has one of the largest and best equipped armies in black Africa. According to United States officials, more than a thousand Soviet military advisers are now in Somalia, on the horn of Africa. Pentagon officials are worried that Soviet bases on the horn of Africa, controlling the oil shipping lanes and facing the middle and south Atlantic, could be used to disrupt Western sea communications.

The Kenya's are especially anxious because Somalia — which is armed with Soviet medium tanks, armored personnel carriers and an estimated fifty combat aircraft — has said that more than a third of Kenyan territory, inhabited by ethnic Somalis, belongs to Somalia.

As for Uganda, whose army of 20,000 is equipped with Soviet tanks, MIG's, missiles and rockets, President Idi Amin has said that he refuses to accept the current border with Kenya. He says that more than a fourth of Kenyan territory, reaching 20 miles west of Nairobi, belongs to Uganda, under former colonial boundaries.

An American official said today: "The Kenyans aren't alarmed; they're not wringing their hands. But they're very worried about this situation with Somalia and Uganda."

The Kenyans, who have largely been equipped by the British, have no tanks, a handful of armored cars, 14 combat aircraft — including British-made Hawker Hunter jet fighters and Strikemasters — and token artillery. American officials said that the F-5's were the only military arms sought in discussions today between Mr. Rumsfeld and Kenyan officials.

India Adds Year to the Preventive Detention Period

NEW DELHI, June 16 (AP)—The Indian Government today extended for one year its right to hold political prisoners without trial or formal charges. The extension was seen as a strong indication that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi had no immediate plans to lift the state of emergency she imposed last June 26. A Government statement said the action was taken "for dealing effectively with the emergency." It came in the form of Presidential ordinance amending the Maintenance of Internal Security Act, the Government's main weapon for holding political prisoners. Under the amendment, prisoners may be held for 24 months without being informed of the charges against them and without the right to petition for release. The amendment is expected to affect thousands of prisoners, but there is no way to estimate the number. The Government has never given out figures, and opposition estimates of the number of political prisoners run from 10,000 to 100,000. Powers in Constitution The Government's power of preventive detention is set forth in the 25-year-old Constitution, and the internal security act predates the declaration of emergency. But a prisoner's right to know the grounds of his arrest was suspended in one of several decrees by President Fakhrudin Ali Ahmed when the emergency was declared. The President was appointed by Mrs. Gandhi and holds a largely ceremonial office. The constitutionality of the suspension was challenged in court by 43 political prisoners, including four members of Parliament. The Supreme Court, by a 4-1 decision in April, upheld the Government's right to suspend almost all individual rights during times of national emergency, including a prisoner's right to a habeas corpus petition. The lone dissenting opinion came from Justice J. Khanna, who wrote that if a prisoner's right to due process was suspended, "the distinction between a lawless society and one governed by laws would cease to have any meaning."

HIRING OF NEWSMEN BY C.I.A. TO BE TOPIC

Representatives of the National News Council and the Central Intelligence Agency will meet next Thursday in an attempt to clarify the council's position on employment of journalists by the intelligence community, the council's chairman, Stanley H. Fudd, announced yesterday. Mr. Fudd said two council members, William A. Rusher and R. Peter Strauss, and the group's associate director, Ned Schurman, would confer with aides of the C.I.A. director, George Bush, who are authorized to speak for him. The meeting will be held at McLean, Va. The purpose of the meeting, Mr. Fudd said, is "not to seek the names of individuals who

23 Nations Vote to Santiago to Allow Mission to Work

By JUAN de ONIS
Santiago, Chile, June 16—A majority of American States called on Chile to allow the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights to monitor human rights in Chile.

The resolution, adopted by 21 of the 23 nations attending the sixth general assembly of the Organization of American States, Chile abstained in the United States delegation, and been led by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger at the start of the two-day session, voted in favor of the United States mission to Chile, said that the resolution "implies great things for human rights."

The United States had even stronger support from the seven-member Inter-American Commission, but was unable to get the majority of Latin American governments that are members of the organization to vote in favor of a resolution "strongly condemning the Government of Chile for its adoption and implementation of the necessary procedures for preserving and insuring respect for human rights in Chile."

It also requested that the Chilean Government "continue giving the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights all cooperation necessary to carry out its functions."

A British Midlands City, Its Industry and Employment Down, Is Wary of Asian Newcomers

By PETER T. KILDORN
Special to The New York Times

LEICESTER, England, June 12 — The new roof over the big open-air market here behaves in a way that could be characteristic of the whole British economy. It leaks.

It makes the sellers and the shoppers edgy, more so than such worldly events as the recent run on the pound. People here are also edgy about the shoppers they see dressed in turbans and flowing silken saris.

Mostly, though, the people of Leicester seem confused. As many Britons do, they see the Government hurting them in some ways and helping them in others as it tries to steer the country out of years of decline. There are good moods, bad moods and ambivalent moods here.

A little closer to the $17.70 the city would need to break even.

So far, industry has not benefited much from the shift in Government priorities, but there is already a distinct air of optimism in many of Leicester's factories. The fall of the pound has been so acute that almost anything made here now holds a distinct price advantage over the goods of most other countries.

The pound's decline, however, does not affect everyone the same way. "Each time it's devalued," said Barry Jones, a trader in the market here, "it costs us more for the fruit we import." In general, people do not have much to say about the pound. The decline is not something they can relate easily to their daily lives.

"It's when you go outside and try to buy a cup of coffee in Germany that really brings it home to you," said Roger Christian, a manager at the British United Shoe Machinery Company, the city's biggest employer.

Immigrants and Jobs

What does get through to people here is race—the 25,000 immigrants here from India, Pakistan, the West Indies and the old Asian colonies of Uganda. Resentment over immigrants fares up in Britain every few years. Right now it is flaring.

People in Leicester see the impact of immigration in Highfields, a deteriorating section of the city where many of the immigrants live.

They see it in Belgrave Road, an important thoroughfare where half the shops appear to be Asian-owned.

What seems to bother natives of Leicester most, however, is what they see in the factories. They are concerned that in a period of high unemployment jobs that could be going to the English are going to Asians.

Tom, a taxi driver who declined to give his last name, said his wife worked in a dyeing plant where workers are paid according to how much they produce. "Too many Asians are going in there," Tom said. "They're working fantastic hours. They take work home when the dye works close. This is doing other people out of work."

"These things are carrying on now," Tom added, "and in 10 or 15 years we'll be working for them. I'm not color-prejudiced, but it just ain't right."

Time to Make a Stand

In Birmingham, 25 miles west, Robert Relf was jailed for refusing to remove a sign from his house offering it for sale to whites only, a violation of the race-relations laws.

Frederick Turner, has put a sign in front of his small brick home here on Ocean Road. "For Sale to an English family."

"Being an Englishman," he said, "I think the time has come to make a stand. I don't want to start the octopuses' tentacles going across the town."

Mr. Turner is a member of Britain's anti-immigration political party, the National Front. In local elections here two months ago the party fielded 48 candidates. It did not win any seats, but it collected an unprecedented total of 40,000 votes.

About 10 percent of Leicester's population is called and calls itself "colored."

Lawrie Simpkin, news editor of the Leicester Mercury, said the National Front's attitude was not typical of the city.

A Duke Sees a 'Siege'

"People are willing to treat them as equals," he said, "but having said that, they don't want any more because they're a strain on social services." Some people are grateful for the immigrants, he said, because without them there would be no garbagemen.

"As long as your daughter doesn't marry one," Mr. Simpkin said, "you don't worry."

The man with the greatest power outside the central government to deal with Leicester's problems is Charles John Robert Manners, the 10th Duke of Rutland. He has two castles—one for weekdays, one for weekends—and 18,000 acres of farmland.

The Duke is chairman of the Leicestershire County Council and a prominent member of the national Conservative Party. By popular consent, he rules much of a terrain that his forebears once ruled by inherited fiat. He is bitter about much that has happened since World War II. While he aged by restraint, he sees new turn in movements as a Government to allow to break into private property that is under siege," he principal home Castle, "and I'm that because I of Rutland living For a while, that his own old Marquis of Granby able to succeed voir. But there's he said: "My father would never let grandfather told that he wouldn't "Things have to get better, haven't they?" said a sixtyish shopper. Her own spirits must have been up, because she was paying 40 pence for a pound of tomatoes that she could have had at the adjoining stand for 34. "Things can't get any worse," she said, "can they?"

Where Richard III Lost

Leicester is an average British City in the industrial Midlands of England. With a population of 280,000 it has Roman ruins, a cathedral, a guild hall, and a river, the Soar. The body of King Richard III was dumped into it after he lost the battle that ended the War of the Roses.

Leicester blossomed in the 19th century, in the waning days of the Industrial Revolution. Then as now, many Leicester factories made women's shoes and knitted goods, for the most part hosiery. The shoes and hose have been hit by cheap imports from the Far East and Eastern Europe. Leicester also specializes in making machines that make shoes and hosiery, and the Far East and eastern Europe are big customers for the machines.

Leicester's problems today are Britain's problems. There is higher unemployment than the city has known for a generation because the Government cannot afford the economic consequences of creating extra jobs.

Prices in the shops are not rising so fast as they were a year ago, thanks to Government efforts to control inflation. But control has meant that incomes are rising even more slowly, so it is harder for people to make ends meet. There are few new cars around.

Services Down, Fees Up

Further, the Government is tightening the belt on the welfare state that it began creating 30 years ago. So much money has been going into public spending, London feels, that there has not been enough for industry to build plants to compete with the Germans, the Japanese and the Scandinavians.

In Leicester and throughout Britain public services are being cut, or the fees for those services are being raised. Bus fares in Leicester have doubled over two years. Sunday service has virtually been eliminated.

Last year, the Leicestershire County Council bought a summer camp 100 miles north. It will not open this year, and county authorities said it is likely to be sold. Fewer children are given free swimming lessons, library hours have reduced, grass in the parks is cut less often and an old people's home has been closed.

The Pound and Daily Life

The great drain on the city's budget is public housing. The city owns about a third of all the housing here. Two years ago, it charged $6.20 a week for the average apartment. Now it charges $8.60.

The President called for Washington to have a "constant dialogue" with all sectors of American society. Officials of the Hispanic-American Association said they believed the President when he signed in the White House garden.

The measure requires the State and Commerce Departments and the Office of Management and Budget to muster additional data to "promote the improvement and expansion of social and economic conditions relating to Americans of Spanish origin."

Ford Signs Witness Bill

WASHINGTON, June 16 (UPI) — President Ford signed today a bill providing for leave for Federal employees to testify as witnesses in court proceedings where the Government is involved. The legislation provides that when an employee is summoned in his personal capacity to appear in a judicial proceeding on behalf of a state or local government, he is entitled to "court leave." The provisions do not apply to an employee summoned to testify in personal capacity on behalf of private parties.

U.S. Is Said to Caution Jordan Against Buying Soviet Missiles

WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP)—United States officials have cautioned King Hussein that Jordan stands to lose millions of dollars in American military and economic aid if it buys an anti-aircraft missile system from the Soviet Union.

King Hussein, who will go to Moscow tomorrow, had made a tentative deal to buy 14 Hawk anti-aircraft missile batteries from the United States. But the deal fell through when Jordan could not arrange $850 million financing for the missiles and associated equipment and training.

Saudi Arabia had been counted on to pay a large share but backed out when it learned the total cost.

In what some sources say was an attempt to press the United States into better terms, King Hussein contacted the Russians and plans were made for his trip to Moscow.

The United States officials say nothing is definite yet. A deal is still possible between Jordan and the United States, they say, and King Hussein and the Russians have some serious problems in concluding a sale.

For instance, the Russians reportedly told the Jordanians that the country needed an integrated air defense system, meaning not merely missile batteries but also airplanes and radar. In addition, Moscow wants to send Russian advisers to Jordan to help run the system.

American officials say the traditionally strong ties between Jordan and Washington would be seriously endangered by such a deal.

Hussein Confirms Talks
VIENNA, June 16 (AP)—King Hussein said at a news conference today, "It is no secret that we have begun to investigate the possibilities of providing our armed forces with an air defense system of Soviet manufacture.

"We are now in the preliminary stage of this investigation," he added.

Referring to an American threat to withhold aid, King Hussein said, "It is news to me," and stressed: "We will do what is necessary to provide ourselves with what we need to defend ourselves, from any source."

TIM SEEKS ON CYPRUS

New Mandate Keeping Force

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretary General U Thant, speaking after the vote, urged an early renewal of the talks between the Greek and Turkish communities of Cyprus, unless they approached the negotiations with more flexibility than they have demonstrated thus far.

The Council of Ministers approved a resolution renewing the mandate of the United Nations peace force in Cyprus for 17 months before the scheduled expiration of its term at midnight. China and Britain, formerly Dahomey, did not participate in the vote.

The same text asked Mr. Waldheim to assist the parties in resuming negotiations for a settlement of their dispute and to report back by Oct. 30. Speaking after the vote, the Secretary General, who had urged an early renewal of the talks between the Greek and Turkish communities of Cyprus, unless they approached the negotiations with more flexibility than they have demonstrated thus far.

The Turkish Cypriots in the Council have again pressed the Nicosia administration to accept a federation for Cyprus in which there would be two self-contained ethnic communities, Greek and Turkish.

Italian Reds Gain in Foes' Stronghold

By STEVEN V. ROBERTS
Special to The New York Times

AVEZZANO, Italy, June 16 — New-mown hay has brought the sweet smell of summer to the Abruzzi mountains. Red poppies blaze across the fields like pools of fire. In the cool of evening, the people of Avezzano gather in the piazza and celebrate an ancient ritual: talking and walking, watching and being watched. Last month, Enrico Berlinguer, the Communist leader, came to this piazza and opened his party's national election campaign. His appearance posed a symbolic challenge to the stronghold of the Christian Democrats, the towns and villages of rural Italy where they have ruled supreme for 30 years.

Town Is Divided

As the campaign moves toward its conclusion this weekend, Avezzano is divided and confused. Tradition holds strong, and the Christian Democrats will win again, but Communist strength is clearly growing. As Deputy Mayor Pasquale Di Matteo put it:

"People are going to vote for the Communists who do not believe in the Communists. They just want to vote against the Christian Democrats."

Avezzano, a market town of 35,000 people, demonstrates the sources of Christian Democratic power in rural Italy. One of the party's main advantages—as well as its chief disadvantage—is sheer longevity.

In a town like this, a large number of jobs—in banks and hospitals, in public schools and agencies—are controlled by the party power structure. Most workers paid for their posts with cash. And all of them paid with political loyalty and support. At this point, they are not likely to vote against their psychopods.

The second source of power is the Roman Catholic Church. In the front hall of the large cathedral, the priest has posted a statement by the Italian Conference of Bishops. Its main thesis reads: You cannot be a Christian and a Marxist at the same time.

Italians do not read very much, and in small towns like this they do not read at all, said a local teacher. "They do not know what's really happening, and the church can convince them to vote for the Christian Democrats."

"In Rome or Milan it is fashionable to be a leftist these days," he went on.

"I agree that the Christian Democrats have made errors, but they're not as bad as people say. After the war Italy had completely collapsed and the Christian Democrats built it up again. The economy is down now, but you cannot forget what they did."

A Guarantee of Freedom

"We might be mad," added another teacher, "but at least we have a chance to say we're mad. The Christian Democrats have guaranteed freedom."

But the most powerful argument is anti-Communism, straight and simple. One Christian Democratic poster shows a red dragon, adorned with the hammer and sickle. The legend reads, "Vote Against."

"My friends and I are very afraid," said Angela Di Lorenzo, 28, a clerk in a pharmacy. "I have a son and I'm thinking about him. I don't want him to be a robot in the hands of Communist rulers."

A bank teller added: "I prefer the bad government we have now if we keep our freedom."

But when Mr. Berlinguer came to Avezzano he understood now things were changing here. A new highway has brought Rome within an hour's drive and young people are taking it to the university. There is more industry, more tourists, and less isolation. Fewer families work the land and fear the priests. More people work in offices and live on salaries. They have fewer vested interests and more willingness to take risks.

Communist Vote Explained

A group of young men, all university graduates and all unemployed, stood idly watching girls in the piazza. All are voting Communist, and one explained why: "Until now, we've had no say in government, but now we want to participate. Communism also means social equality. It's not right for someone to have a lot of money and others to go hungry."

Some people here hope that the Communists will restore order, and even decency. They feel that the scandals and corruption at the top of the government have poisoned the whole society. "With this government," sneered a young Communist, "just the stupid people work hard."

Evening mass was over. A few old women in loose black dresses filed out of the church, past the warring of the bishops. Across the piazza the young girls in tight blue jeans could not have cared less.

Giscard, on TV, Asserts Right To Determine Policy of France

Special to The New York Times

PARIS, June 16—In a wide-ranging television interview tonight, President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing asserted his right to determine basic French policy and to decide the composition of the Government.

The President, who has come under attack in what the interviewer called a "ferocious political battle," answered questions for more than an hour about his character, his preferences in poetry, his public style, as well as his view of the Presidency and his determination to stay in power.

He seemed relaxed, even confident, and sought to show that he remained fully in charge despite criticism that he demonstrated a lack of authority and indecision. There will be no Cabinet shuffle in July as officials have been predicting, he said, and he saw no reason to hold Parliamentary elections before the deadline in spring 1978, as many politicians have begun to advise.

It was an appeal to the nation over the head of Prime Minister Jacques Chirac, whom the President described only as "loyal and active," and of the political parties on whom he said he did not rely.

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing said he was no longer a member of the Independent Republican Party, which he organized and which had been his basic support. He challenged a description of Prime Minister Chirac as the "leader of the Gaullists." Technically, the Gaullist party is headed by its secretary general, Yves Guéna, but Mr. Chirac is the man who reorganized the group and is now its dominant figure.

Mr. Chirac's associates had been saying that there would be Cabinet changes in July, it would convert to the new shuffling major ministries and cutting the number of posts by nearly one-half.

They had also disclosed that he considered resigning last month, basically in protest against the President's unwillingness to give him full enough powers to run day-to-day policy and command election strategy.

Since then, Paris has been feverish with rumor, and there was speculation in the last few days that the President would turn the tables and dismiss Mr. Chirac.

The President's denial repeated several times in response to the interviewer's initial incredulity, that any changes were coming in July was evidently meant to scotch these rumors.

Washington Post Plans Modified 6-Column Format

WASHINGTON, June 16 (UPI)—The Washington Post said today that it planned to switch from an eight-column page to a six-column format on its inside news pages on Aug. 2.

The change also involves narrowing advertising columns to provide nine per page, which Post executives said would increase the number of lines of advertising on each page by 308 lines or 12.5 percent.

The eight-column format will be retained on Page 1 "to keep the traditional look," said John Lemmon, an assistant managing editor who supervises front page layout.

Several major papers have converted to the new "six on nine" format in the last year. The New York Times announced earlier this week that it would convert to the new format on Sept. 7.

Alcoholism Treatment: Rand Finding on Resumption of Drinking Sets Off Dispute on New Therapies

ANE E. BRODY
 Corporation study last week suggesting alcoholics can, after a moderate relapse without risking relapse, has brought to the surface a long-standing dispute that some experts say has stifled the development of new approaches to alcoholism.

In two decades, this controversy has arch-scientist against therapist, scientific against deeply held beliefs, new therapies tried-and-true.

of studies with findings that have been rejected, at times suppressed.

report, like earlier studies that some alcoholics learn to drink, has been vehemently opposed by alcoholism groups, which are in vanguard and dangerous to thousands of nine million alcoholics who have arrested their rough total abstinence.

acknowledges, particularly the National Council on Alcoholism, the nation's only vocational organization. It has charged that the study would have recovered alcoholics to the physical, social and emotional degradation of alcoholism.

study authors have said that it is currently impossible to predict who could not maintain sobriety without relapsing into abuse and they urged alcoholics who are determined to try to abstain to do so under the circumstances, except in the case of alcoholism, said, the study did not have been the public.

found in 1944, and its 130 affiliates in 10 countries, as well as Anonymous, which has a membership of more than 10 million, have insisted that abstinence is the only way to overcome alcoholism. These groups say, is a drink away from alcoholism, he must first drink.

including a spokesman for A.A. and several other groups who stated that any alcoholism was able to return to drinking was not alcoholic to begin with.

researchers who have shown otherwise at abstinence is the treatment for alcoholics (and the cure for those whose lives have been damaged by alcohol), they add ways are urgently needed to help those who find abstinence or intolerable.

grams that recommend abstinence also become social drinkers, although they may not maintain contact with the therapy group since they are neither abusing nor abstaining from alcohol.

Some alcoholics who reject abstinence can be trained to drink moderately.

Embarrassing Findings: In 1957, Drs. Melvin L. Selzer and William Holloway of the University of Michigan reported that a follow-up of 83 alcoholics treated at a state hospital uncovered 13 who later became social drinkers. According to Dr. Selzer, "The data prompted the agency that provided funds for the study virtually to order us to omit these 'embarrassing' findings."

Five years later, a British psychiatrist, Dr. D. I. Davies, issued a widely publicized report that seven to 11 years after discharge from the hospital, seven of 93 men treated for alcoholism were found to be drinking moderately and none had been drunk even once since treatment.

Dr. Davies's findings were attacked as irrelevant, untrue, dangerous, counter to long-standing clinical experience and as requiring no rethinking of the view that alcoholism is an irreversible, incurable illness. However, Dr. Davies's observation was repeated in numerous similar studies in several countries.

A national survey by a San Francisco sociologist, Don Cahalan, and his colleagues disclosed that more than half of the persons who reported having a severe drinking problem in 1969 were no longer abusing alcohol four years later.

Loss of Control: Another study among 521 San Francisco men who were "problem drinkers" but who were not treated for alcoholism showed that, depending on the criteria used, between 11 and 71 percent had spontaneously improved in four years although only one had become totally abstinent.

Some doctors also tested the "loss of control" characteristic of alcoholism by giving hospitalized alcoholics unlimited access to alcohol but rewarding or punishing them for exceeding certain limits on consumption.

In all the studies, the alcoholics were able to stop drinking when they had reached the limit, but before they had become intoxicated, indicating that there was no biochemical "trigger" that kept the alcoholic drinking.

At a California state hospital, a simulated barroom and mild electric shocks were used to help train 20 alcoholic volunteers in the techniques of social drinking. At the end of one year, 75 percent of these "controlled-drinking" patients (and 80 percent of a similar group that chose abstinence as its goal) were reported functioning well and not abusing alcohol.

In the Rand study, approximately one-quarter of 1,340 alcoholics were found to be drinking within normal limits 18 months after entering an alcohol treatment program. Only 10 percent were totally abstinent, although 70 percent were judged to be "in remission."

The Rand Corporation is a large private research organization in Santa Monica, Calif.

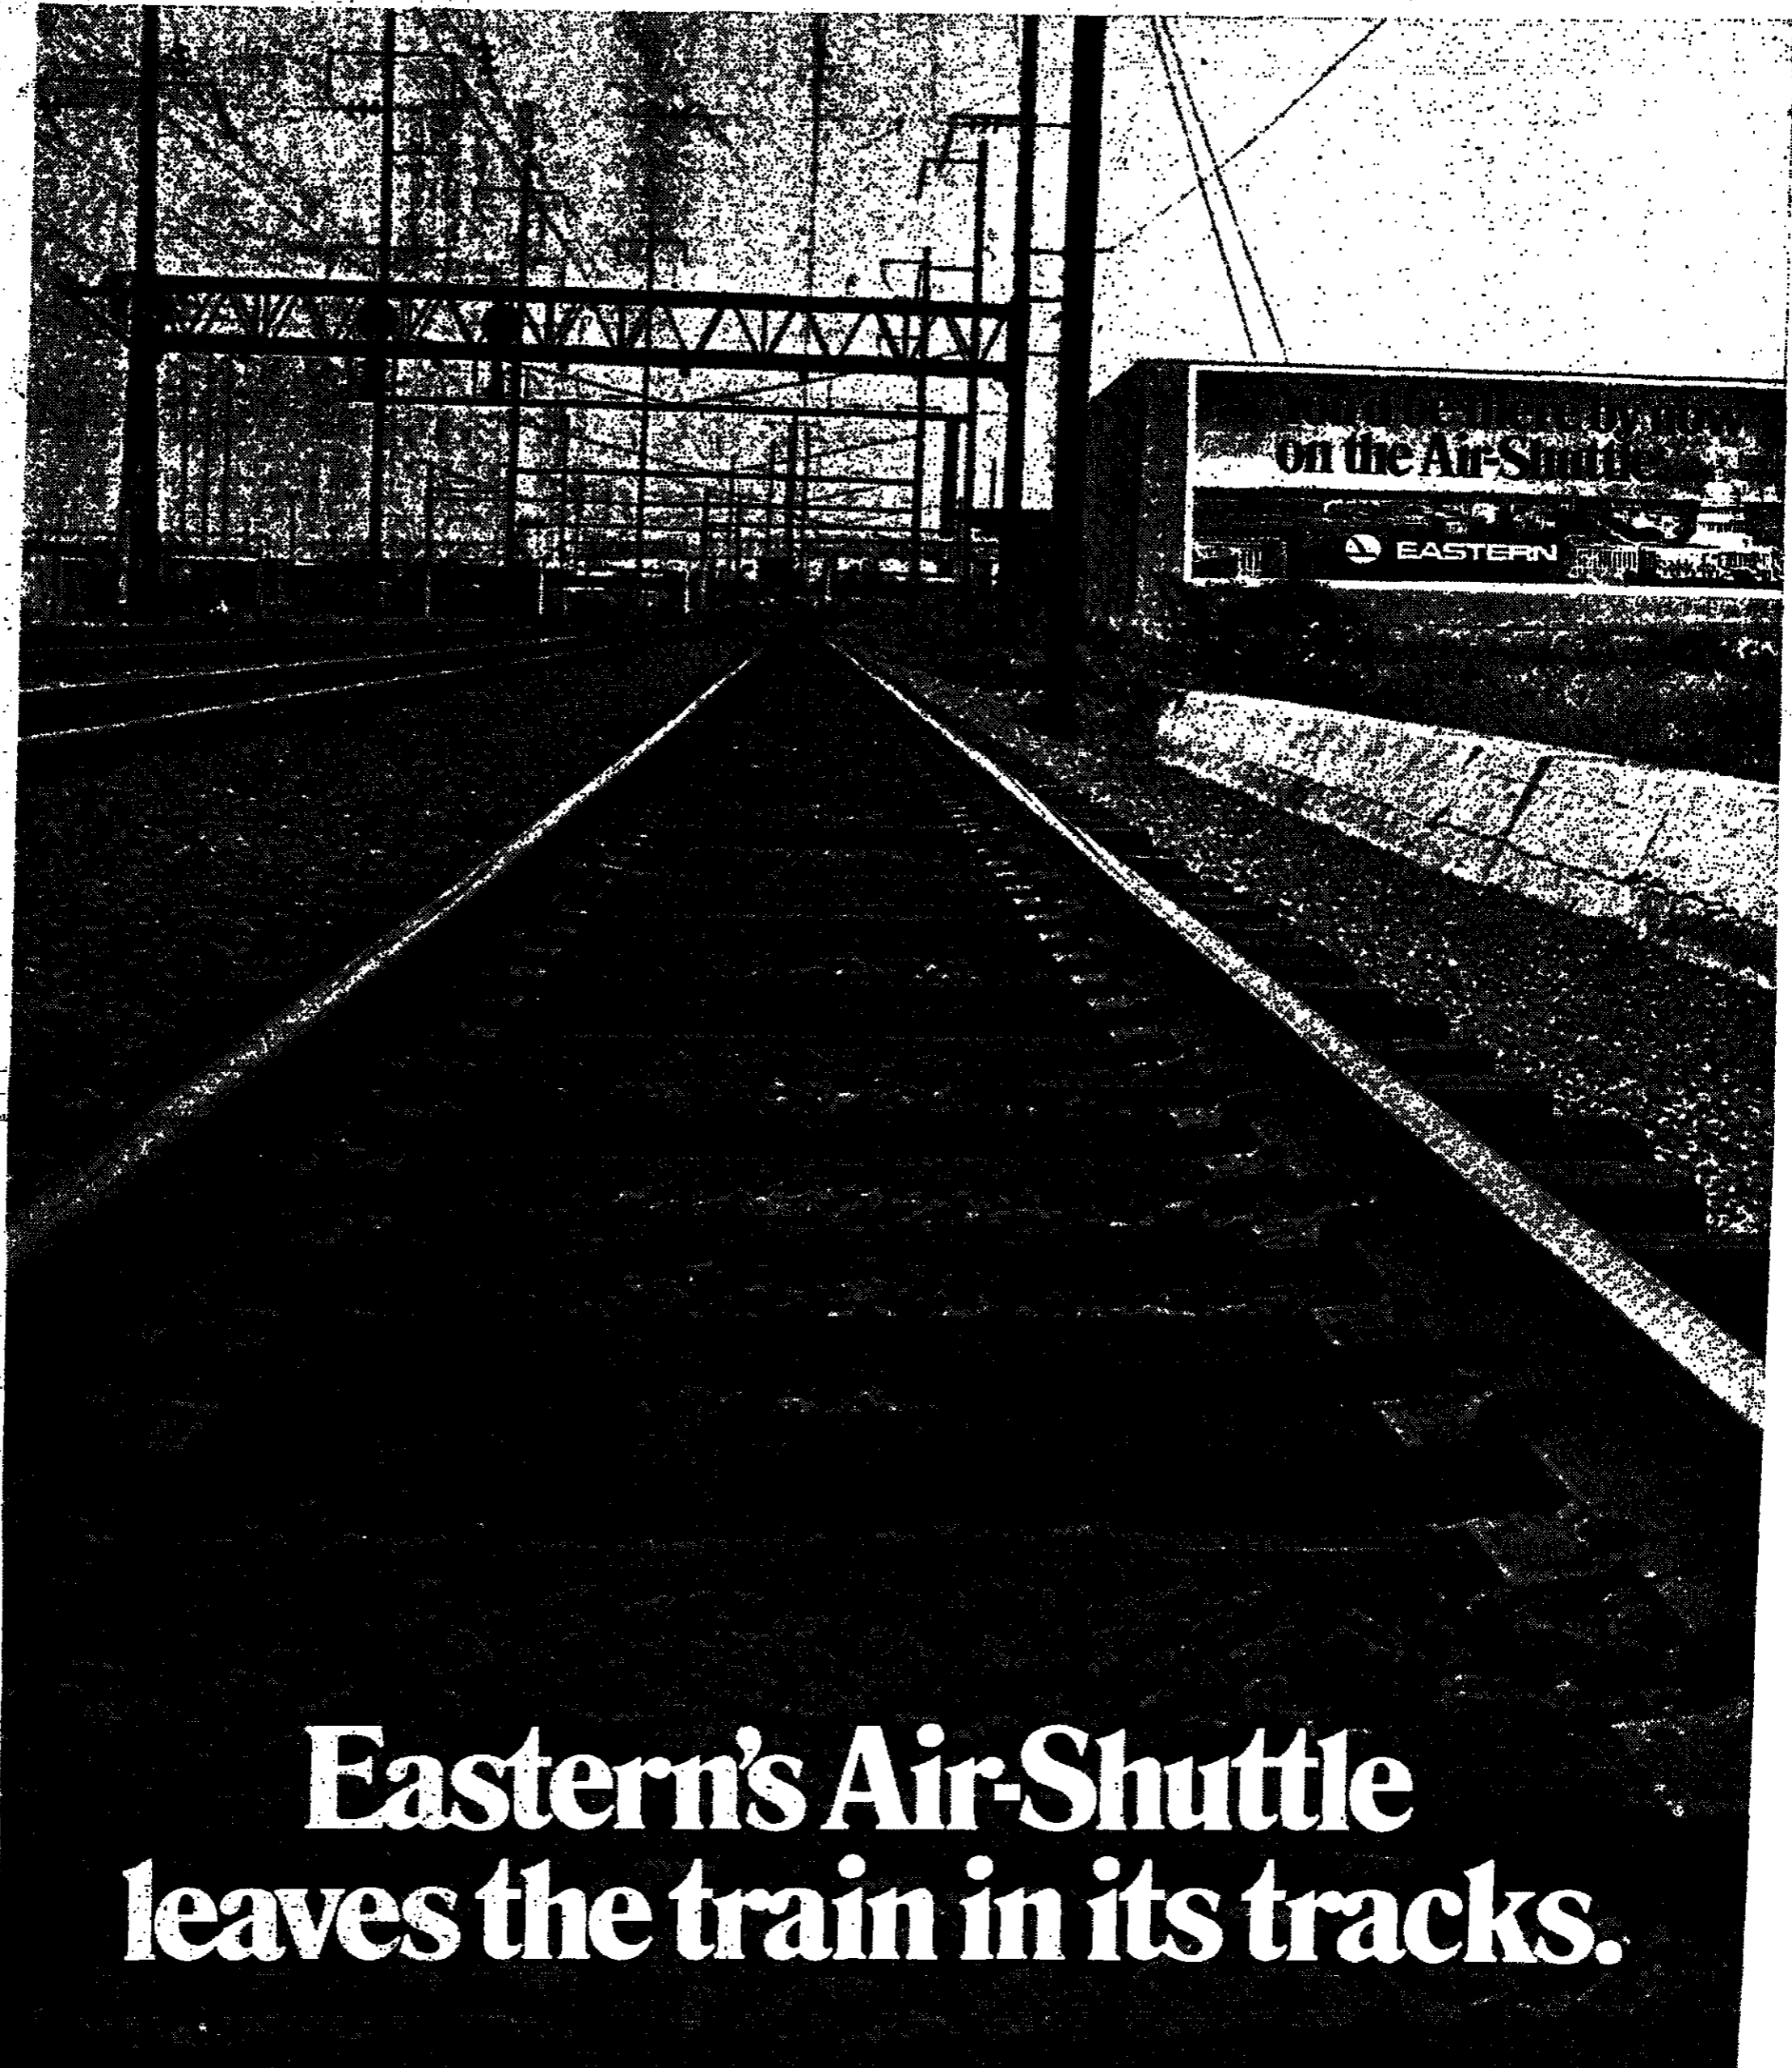

In the current issue of the American Journal of Psychiatry, Dr. Melvin Kalb, a psychologist, and Morton S. Propper, a social worker, who have both worked in a California alcoholism program, state that treatments for alcoholism "have developed and survive not with the aid of research but in spite of it."

Research findings — especially those not in keeping with the "party line" — seem to have been simply ignored, they said, adding that "this loyalty to traditional concepts is the 'glue' that binds the nonprofessionals in alcoholism treatment."

They noted that many in the treatment field are themselves recovered alcoholics whose sobriety is founded on abstinence and who may be "deeply disturbed by the idea that some alcoholics can recover and drink socially."

In 1962, Dr. Selzer said that alcoholism workers prefer not to hear about successes in social drinking because it "upsets their treatment concepts." He added, however, that even though experiments with social drinking "will yield discouraging results in most instances, this is not sufficient excuse for prejudiced persons to vilify the truth."

2 Nurses Charged in Deaths at Michigan Hospital degree murder, 10 counts of introducing poison into the intravenous medicine of patients at the hospital and one count of conspiracy to commit murder.

The arrests and indictments ended a 10-month investigation conducted by the bureau. Both nurses were employed in the intensive care unit at the hospital in Ann Arbor during the period when an unusually high number of respiratory arrests occurred.
The two nurses were charged in the deaths of five patients at the hospital, identified by the bureau as John Maurice Herman, James E. Gould, Joseph W. Green, Adam Gilbert and Joseph C. Brown. In addition, Miss Narciso and Mrs. Perez were charged with introducing a poison into the intravenous medicine of 10 other patients. Both were scheduled for arraignment tomorrow before Federal magistrates in Detroit and Chicago.

Mr. Bailey said Miss Narciso was arrested at the V.A. Hospital in Ann Arbor and Mrs. Perez was arrested at the V.A. Hospital in Chicago by F.B.I. agents.
Because the killings were committed on Federal property, Mr. Bailey said, both suspects will be tried in Federal courts. Conviction on one or more of the counts could result in a sentence of up to life in prison.

Brief Statement
Mr. Bailey read a brief statement on the indictments and arrests to reporters, but refused to answer questions. United States Attorney Richard DeLois, the Government prosecutor in the case, was expected to hold a news conference tomorrow to discuss the arrests in detail.
Investigators earlier determined that many of the breathing failures at the hospital had been caused when unknown assailants injected patients with a potentially lethal muscleparalyzing chemical, pancuronium bromide.

The two nurses were identified as suspects in the case earlier this year, but were not formally charged. Miss Narciso continued to work at the hospital in Ann Arbor and Mrs. Perez remained on the staff of the facility in Chicago where she had been transferred.
Investigators said they believed as many as 17 patients suffered breathing failures at the Ann Arbor hospital last summer after they were injected with Pavulon, a fast-acting muscle-paralyzing drug. Many patients survived the attacks, but investigators said then that they believed that as many as six had been killed.

U.S. Steel Again Fights E.P.A. Over Mill Pollution in Alabama

By B. DRUMMOND AYRES Jr.
Special to The New York Times

ATLANTA, June 16 — The United States Steel Corporation, which is involved in a number of air pollution controversies around the country, has reopened a dispute with the Environmental Protection Agency over mill emissions in Birmingham, Ala., the South's most polluted city.
The company wants to continue operating its old-fashioned open hearth steel furnaces through 1977, despite an earlier promise to shut them by July 1.

The Federal environmental agency, which extracted the shutdown promise more than a year ago after long and frequently acrimonious negotiations, says the hearths must close by the agreed-upon date because they discharge more than 3,000 tons of reddish iron dust into Birmingham's air each year, and because they are a major cause of the city's consistent inability to meet air pollution standards.

Air pollution in Birmingham has diminished considerably since enactment of the Federal Clean Air Act in 1970. But pollution is still so serious that the Federal agency plans to ask Alabama to set new emission standards, according to Jack E. Raven, the administrator of the agency's Southern office, in Atlanta.
Before the Clean Air Act was passed, 200,000 tons of dust and dirt were spewing into Birmingham's air every year, mostly from the city's large concentration of metal manufacturing plants.
That figure has dropped to less than 50,000 tons yearly. The goal is 25,000 tons.

Environmental Protection Agency officials say U.S. Steel not only is a major contributor to Birmingham's air problem but also fights clean-air compliance with unusual tenacity. The company has been in similar pollution struggles in Gary, Ind., and Pittsburgh.
The original agreement to shut the hearths by July 1 had required a Federal court's approval before taking effect. The company asked the Federal agency to ask the court to move the date back to December 1977.
The agency refused in a letter Mr. Raven sent a few days ago.

U.S. Steel officials said in Birmingham today that no decision had been made on taking further action in court. The officials denied there was any corporate policy to resist pollution laws and noted that the company was spending more than $60 million in Alabama on new steelmaking facilities and pollution control devices.
"We do not understand the Environmental Protection Agency's opposition," Mr. Bullard said in a written statement. "Continued operation of the open hearths until the new facilities are complete would permit an orderly transition with maximum contribution to both employment and steel production and minimal effect on air quality."
Originally, U.S. Steel had five open hearths in Birmingham. Only two are still operating because last year's shutdown agreement required three to be phased out by the end of 1975.

That agreement was reached only after U.S. Steel paid a $35,000 fine for operating its hearths beyond an earlier deadline. If the company fails to meet the next deadline on July 1, it could face further fines of up to $50,000 daily, and its corporate officers could be held in contempt of court.
By the company's estimate, 300 employees will be out of work if the last hearths are shut on schedule. However, those hearths have not been operating at full capacity, and in the past, workers have been shifted to other steel-making sites whenever hearths have been phased out.

Carter Opposes Use Of Troops in Lebanon

SEA ISLAND, Ga. (AP)—Jimmy Carter said today that the United States should encourage "a complete survey" into the slaying of the United States Ambassador to Lebanon, Francis E. Meloy Jr., and an aide, but added that the United States should not become involved militarily in the Lebanese conflict because of the slayings.
Mr. Carter, leading the race for the Democratic Presidential nomination, said if he were President he would not send United States military forces to the Middle Eastern country.

"I don't think we can do anything except continue encouraging an early, peaceful settlement and cessation of bloodshed," Mr. Carter said. He said he would urge the Government of Lebanon to find the killers and bring them to justice.

Kelley Says Apology for Abuses of F.B.I. Was to Placate Congress

By JOHN M. CREWDSON

WASHINGTON, June 16

Clarence M. Kelley, the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, has said privately that his recent apology for the bureau's past abuses of its power was made in the hope that it "might well prevent or at least somewhat retard the proliferation of highly restrictive legislation" directed at the bureau by Congress.

The apology, in which Mr. Kelley termed some of the F.B.I.'s past intelligence activities "clearly wrong and quite indefensible," was incorporated in a speech delivered last May 8 at Westminster College in Missouri, Mr. Kelley's home state.

Letter to Ex-Agent

The director did not specify the actions to which he referred, saying only that the bureau was "truly sorry we were responsible for instances which now are subject to such criticism, and pointing out that they had occurred, not under his own administration, but during the 48-year tenure of the late J. Edgar Hoover, his predecessor.

Mr. Kelley's comment that he had hoped the speech, which came at the close of a year-long Congressional investigation of the bureau and other intelligence agencies, might deter tough new legislative controls on the bureau's operations, was made in a May 13 letter to Ralph H. Jones, president of the Society of Former Special Agents of the bureau.

Mr. Jones reproduced Mr. Kelley's letter of explanation, which he said had followed his "personal inquiry" to Director Kelley for clarification of the speech, and distributed it to the society's several thousand members. A copy of the letter was obtained by The New York Times.

In it, Mr. Kelley noted that the bureau had been the subject of "considerable attention" by Congress and the press and that recent news accounts had been "most damaging" because they "imply we are unwilling to recognize and admit when we er."

"Of course," the letter continued, "we all cannot agree on what can or should be said. Someone, however, must make a decision at such times. I made it because I believe this action might well prevent or at least somewhat retard the proliferation of highly restrictive legislation."

Three days after the Westminister speech, Senate leaders reached agreement on the creation of a permanent committee that will oversee the Central Intelligence Agency, but which will share its jurisdiction over the F.B.I. with existing committees that have had that responsibility for years. The sharing of bureau oversight among the new and older existing committees was seen at the time by some senators as a concession to powerful conservative interests within that body.

TEXT OF LETTER

Following is the text of Mr. Kelley's letter to Mr. Jones:

Dear Ralph: There have been some apprehensions expressed about my speech at 1976. I want to tell you about it.

"As well you know, the bureau has been receiving considerable attention by the Congress and the news media for several months. Lately, the news accounts have been more frequent, more probative and most damaging to our position, because they imply we are unwilling to recognize and admit when we er. Congress continues to demonstrate an inclination to seriously consider legislation which would be restrictive to us. Frankly, our credibility is, in my estimation, in jeopardy.

"It might well be said this feeling does not reflect that of the rest of the country. That may be so but here is where Congress resides and it is here that their opinions are largely formed. We have friends in Congress and appreciate them. I only wish we had more.

"I therefore carefully reviewed the situation and decidated the time had come to make certain admissions. They were not specific nor directed at any individuals. I think the issue has now been resolved. Of course, we all cannot agree on what can or should be said. Someone, however, must make a decision at such times. I made it because I believe this action might well prevent or at least somewhat retard the proliferation of highly restrictive legislation.

"I realize such a speech would invoke some criticism. I can only say I have tried to be fair at all times. Time will determine the wisdom of my action. I am sure you join me in the hope the future is a more pleasant one.

"I want to renew my pledge to all the ex-agents to do my best to maintain the position of pre-eminence for the bureau."

Congressman Cites Kindness to Explain Ex-Prostitute's Pay

CLEVELAND, June 16 (UPI)

Representative Charles A. Vanik, Democrat of Ohio, said yesterday that a woman living in California the last several months and who had a police record for prostitution was kept on the payroll of his local district office out of compassion.

A copyrighted story in The Cleveland Plain Dealer said the woman had been arrested for prostitution and had not reported for work in several months.

Mr. Vanik said he did not know about her police record until the newspaper told him. He said the woman was hired in 1969 on the recommendation of a city councilman in his district who is now dead.

The newspaper said it could not be determined whether Mr. Vanik or his district office manager in Cleveland hired her.

Mr. Vanik said he had not seen the woman in more than three years and never had a personal relationship with her, but was aware she was having mental problems.

Mr. Vanik said the woman telephoned him from California last Thursday "and told me that reporters were attempting to question her. She told me she was attempting to get into the hospital of the University of California at Los Angeles."

Mr. Vanik said the woman's salary was reduced in February to $100 a month, the minimum allowing her to retain hospitalization coverage. He said she was kept on the payroll because a psychiatric social worker warned that dismissal "would be likely to trigger a catastrophe in her life."

The woman was convicted of prostitution in Buffalo in 1957 and was arrested for the same offense in Cleveland in 1961. Mr. Vanik said he intended to continue paying her $100 a month until the House Ethics committee told him what to do.

Representative Allan T. Howe, Utah Democrat, with his wife, Marieue, at news session in Salt Lake City.

Women and Rights Units Assail Prostitute Decoys

By GRACE LICHTENSTEIN
Special to The New York Times

SALT LAKE CITY, June 16—The prostitute decoy program, under which Representative Allan T. Howe was arrested last Saturday night here, is one that has long troubled both civil libertarians and feminists. Mr. Howe, a freshman Democrat from Utah, was booked after he allegedly solicited sex for money from two women sitting in a car along West Second South, Salt Lake City's well-known redlight district. The women were decoys—civilian part-time employees of the city police department. Mr. Howe said afterward that he had been lured into a trap by a man who said he would take him to a party after a Democratic function. The charge of soliciting sex for pay is a misdemeanor with a penalty of a fine up to $299, up to six months in jail, or both.

Not Yet Arraigned
Mr. Howe, who returned to Salt Lake City this morning with his wife and several children, has not been arraigned yet. But he immediately came under pressure to quit his campaign for re-election. He appeared today to be resisting that pressure. At a news conference, he said only that he was conferring with lawyers, party officials and constituents.

The pressure increased today when the president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons), Spencer W. Kimball, said in London that it would be a good idea for Mr. Howe to step aside. The decoy program has operated here for eight years, and 1,129 men have been arrested, according to the assistant chief of police, D. D. Roberts. The conviction rate is 91 percent, he said.

Other decoy programs operate in such cities as New York, Washington, Cincinnati and Pasadena, according to the International Association of Chiefs of Police. However, several important feminist, civil liberties and prostitute organizations believe the solution to the problem of prostitution is not more arrests, but decriminalization. "We want the government to stay out of the bedroom," said Randy Newby of Coyote, a prostitute group based in San Francisco. The National Organization for Women holds the same position. Bruce Emiss of the New York Civil Liberties Union remarked, "We think it's unseemly for the government to participate in the creation of criminal acts and then prosecute someone for joining in them. It's an inappropriate use of government resources in victimless crimes when they could be paying more attention to serious crimes."

Equality Sought
Nevertheless, such organizations feel that as long as women—the sellers—are being prosecuted for soliciting, the buyers should be, too. "We thought it was a little more equal," said Eloise McQuown, a leader of the Utah Women's Political Caucus, which supported Mr. Howe's election two years ago. "But we are concerned with this as a peoples issue. We don't think it makes good sense to trap people."

Chief Roberts said he understood the use of decoys had been upheld by district courts here, although, apparently, the charge of entrapment has never been tested in either the Utah or the United States Supreme Court. To avoid entrapment charges, the decoys are trained never to initiate a conversation with a possible client, according to Chief Roberts. He said the decoys were paid $4.88 an hour, proportionally more than a rookie policeman makes.

Chief Roberts said he thought the well-publicized decoy program had cut prostitution 50 percent in Salt Lake City. But he had no figures to prove this.

G.O.P. Is Planning to Weaken Key House Panel Led by Hays

By RICHARD D. LYONS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 16—The House Republican leaders said today that they would try to shame the Democrats into agreeing to rules changes that would prevent anyone from again amassing as much power as Representative Wayne L. Hays of Ohio. The House Democratic leadership, aware that every member who has been implicated in the Capitol Hill sex scandal has been a Democrat, has been seeking to dampen minority demands that changes are needed to prevent payroll padding and other abuses of power. The Democratic strategy is to smooth over the administrative questions that the cases of Elizabeth Ray and Colleen Gardner have posed, and thus deprive the Republicans of a campaign issue in an election year. Republicans, outnumbered in the House by 2 to 1, have introduced a dozen resolutions intended to correct administrative abuses in the two weeks since Miss Ray was accused. Mr. Hays of having given her a job with no duties in return for sexual favors.

Bottled Up in Panel
But the resolutions are bottled up in the House Administration Committee to which they had to be referred under the House rules. It could be weeks or months before the resolutions could be put to a vote because the committee's chairman, Mr. Hays, is hospitalized in Ohio and the committee's ranking Democrat, Representative Frank Thompson Jr. of New Jersey, refuses to call a meeting.

"I have a clear conflict of interest," Mr. Thompson said. "If I call a meeting it would look as though I'm trying to get rid of Mr. Hays and take over the committee." To do an end run around the committee, Republican leaders have figured out a way to force a vote on the House floor by attaching a rider to the legislative appropriations bill that the chamber is due to pass by the end of the month.

The bill, H.R. 14233, appropriates $780 million for the coming fiscal year for all operations of the House, including such vital items as members' salaries. When the bill comes to the floor, probably a week from Monday, Representative Robert E. Bauman, Republican of Maryland, is to offer an amendment that would rescind the authority of the House Administration Committee "to adjust members' allowances."

In 1971 the House over the objections of such Republican leaders as Representative Gerald R. Ford, then the minority leader, voted to give the Hays committee the power to determine the size of many of the prerequisites enjoyed by the members. These include such things as stationery allowances, travel expenses and many other general expenses.

On the one hand this move exempted members from openly voting themselves many increased benefits. But the move then put many members in the debt of Mr. Hays for minor favors dealing with housekeeping items. Mr. Bauman explained today that because of the internal problems in the Administration Committee, the main Republican resolutions "are not going anywhere right now."

"The beauty of my amendment is that it will force everyone in the House to go on record as being for or against this accumulation of power, and in the wake of what has been exposed recently I don't think that anyone can afford to vote against," Mr. Bauman said. But other Republican attempts to exploit the Hays-Ray case and the similar charge made against Representative John Young of Texas by Mrs. Gardner, apparently will fail. Representative John J. Rhodes of Arizona, the minority leader, today circulated a "dear colleague" letter to drum up backing for audit of the records of all House committees. The Democrats, however, have blunted this attempt by naming an all-Democratic special committee to study accounting systems used by the House.

Rain Floods Houston, Grad, Thousands Routed

By JAMES P. STERRA
Special to The New York Times

HOUSTON, June 16—Unrelenting rains, up to 12 inches in some areas, flooded parts of Houston yesterday, leaving thousands of people stranded and electrical power cut off.

At the nearby Contemporary Arts Museum, dozens of paintings, sculptures and artifacts were reportedly ruined when the basement filled with nine feet of water. Included was part of a collection of artifacts and photographs of General Custer on loan from the West Point museum.

1 Dead in Dakota Flood
DEADWOOD, S. Dak., June 16 (AP)—Flash floods in the northern Black Hills of South Dakota have killed one girl and revived for many residents the memory of the 1972 flood that swept through Rapid City and left 238 persons dead.

Yesterday's flood was brought on by a full day of rain that amounted to as much as 10 inches in some areas. Unlike the 1972 flood, which had search and rescue crews uncovering bodies for days after the rains had stopped, yesterday's high water subsided quickly once the rain stopped.

'Creation of Life' Experiment at Harvard Stirs Heated Debate

Special to The New York Times
CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 16 — Harvard scientists want to experiment with creating new forms of life, but their project is not being greeted with universal joy.

A number of other scientists at the university are warning of the potential dangers of the experiments, and a biologist who works near the planned project wants his office moved. The Mayor of Cambridge says he fears the professors may produce a "monster."

But the scientists who want to carry out the experiment with Government money, while conceding that they do not know what might happen, say they will be very, very careful.

At issue is a laboratory for recombinant DNA experiments, an unusual form of genetic research. DNA stands for deoxyribonucleic acid, the molecule that forms the chromosomes that carry an organism's genetic information.

In the experiments, genes taken from a complex organism would be implanted in a simple organism, thus, in effect creating a new organism. Since the scientists know a great deal about the more simple organisms, the goal is to give them a greater understanding of the genes of the more complex creatures.

Proponents of the experiments argue that the knowledge might have such applications as developing vegetables that fertilize themselves or micro organisms that could clean up oil spills.

But opponents are warning that the experiments could cause unknown diseases — diseases that could be transmitted but not diagnosed or treated.

Hearings Will Be Held

Mayor Alfred E. Vellucci of Cambridge announced yesterday that the City Council would hold hearings on the experiment next week, and that he was looking into whether the building permit could be held up.

"We want to be damned sure the people of Cambridge won't be affected by anything that could crawl out of that laboratory," the mayor said adding, "It is my responsibility to investigate the danger of infections to humans. They may come up with a disease that can't be cured — even a monster. Is this the answer to Dr. Frankenstein's dream?"

Dr. George Wald, the 1967 Nobel Prize winner for biology, urged the mayor to try to block the planned genetic research laboratory.

It is a strange alliance. Dr. Wald, who won widespread recognition with an impassioned speech against the war in Vietnam, has become a familiar figure at protest rallies in the area. Mr. Vellucci, who rolls up solid margins in the blue collar neighborhoods of this largely working class city, has built much of his reputation by being the university.

On Monday, Henry Rosovsky, dean of the faculty of arts and sciences, said that two university review committees had recommended going ahead with the project, and that he was asking the Harvard Corporation to authorize construction of the special laboratory.

But his announcement, taking note that there were those who believed the decision "unwise," put particular stress on safety, saying:

"Both committees—and this is the heart of the matter—agree that there are potential hazards, that safe plans are not the same things as safe execution, and that we will not act responsibly unless unusual discipline is insisted upon."

"Unless the duly constituted committees and safety officers are entirely satisfied, permission to use the facility will not be granted. I say this with the knowledge that our safety record has not always been perfect. I hope to use this opportunity to raise standards of enforcement throughout the entire science area."

The experiments are to be financed through a grant of about $500,000 from the National Institutes of Health. The major condition is the construction of a special safety laboratory, designated as P-3, slightly less secure than what the Army uses for its chemical biological warfare experiments.

The vehicle for the experiments is a common form of bacteria known as E-coli, from which a special laboratory strain has been developed.

Critics of the proposal, like Ruth Gordon, biology professor, call the experiments a health hazard because no one knows what can happen, and possible diseases could easily be carried from the laboratory. But Francis associate dean of the Harvard the Harvard is no evidence decide. It's before, so we consequences to think it's out." His committee approved the chlorinated biphenyls, aged about twice limit. The violation as "serious could cause de physical harm."

County Executives Join Beame In Urging Welfare-Cost Freeze

By EDWARD RAMZAL

Twelve county executives of New York State joined Mayor Beame at City Hall yesterday to urge the Legislature to freeze mandated costs for welfare and Medicaid for the next fiscal year at the present level.

They urged the state to pick up additional program costs over the 1976 level, contending that the higher costs could be made up by savings realized through administrative reforms of the present system.

The executives complain that the state-mandated costs to the local government were forcing real-estate taxes up and leading them to bankruptcy. Stressing the need for the proposed action, they said:

"No other state in the union imposes such a costly social service program on local government as does New York State. As a result of this antiquated policy, most of the counties outside the City of New York are forced to spend more than 50 percent of their budgets for mandated social service costs.

The total welfare budget for New York City this fiscal year is $2.8 billion, of which the city contributed one-fourth and the state and Federal governments the rest. The city's welfare budget is expected to jump to $3.2 billion in the next fiscal year.

Two weeks ago, the county executives took their welfare program to Albany. They reported that they had received a lukewarm reception and that Governor Carey had told them the state budget could not be increased. Mayor Beame said he would go to Albany soon to help promote the campaign. In opposition to Governor

By imposing such a freeze and picking up additional program costs over 1976 expenditure levels, the state would not place its balanced 1976-77 budget in jeopardy. State reimbursement under the plan would not be required until the first or second quarter of the state's 1977-78 fiscal year. Additionally, the ultimate cost of the freeze could be more than compensated in the next year by the savings realized through administrative reforms of the present system by the state."

Alfred B. DeSello of Westchester County said the real-estate tax in his county jumped 23 percent because of the welfare burden this year. He added, "I will not raise property taxes to support welfare again."

John V. N. Klein of Suffolk County said that if he approved a proposed $24 million increase in welfare costs the real estate taxes in Suffolk would rise 17 percent. He said, "I do not intend to lay the cost of welfare on the taxpayers in Suffolk."

Philip Toia, the State Commissioner of Social Services, said that for the calendar year ending in December the total welfare cost for the state would be $6.3 billion. On the basis of past experience, he said that costs would probably increase in the next year by 5 or 6 percent.

Mr. Toia said he recognized "the desperate problem the city and counties have." But he said that he was "not sure" he could go along with the proposals of the executives because "it would give them a blank check."

Extortion Note Preceded Letter Bombs

By EDWARD C. BURKS
 Several large companies that received letter bombs this week reported yesterday that they had earlier ignored extortion letters demanding that they place payments in bank accounts in Matamoros, Mexico.
 In one case, a $16 million certified check was demanded. Matamoros is just across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, Tex.
 As of last night, a total of 16 envelopes containing low-grade explosives had been delivered to offices around the country, including six here. No new letterbombs were reported by the Federal Bureau of Investigation yesterday.
 According to one company official, the F.B.I. has found that extortion demands sent last fall to 200 business executives and large companies generally called for payments to specified accounts in the Matamoros bank.
 However, the F.B.I. learned that the bank accounts mentioned in the letters were fakes, he added.
 Only one of the 16 letterbombs went off, slightly injuring four employees of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, the investment firm at 1 Liberty Plaza in Manhattan.
Threatening Letters
 Both the National Life Insurance Company, based in Montpelier, Vt., and Beatrice Foods Company of Chicago, reported yesterday that they received rambling, threatening letters from a "B.A. Fox" last fall.
 National Life was told to send a representative to Matamoros to make arrangements for depositing $175,000 in the account of a person in the Matamoros bank. The name of the person has been withheld. Beatrice Foods was told to deposit a certified check for $16 million in the account of a person with a "German-sounding name" in the same bank.

 A Beatrice spokesman said that the letter-bomb addressed to its president-elect, Wallace N. Rasmussen, was set with a spring to "work like a mouse-trap," but the spring came loose, and "we were lucky."
Ticks Sent in Letter
 Another recipient of a bomb—a large locally based company that withheld its name—said that it, too, was instructed in an earlier letter to make a deposit in the Matamoros bank.
 In a related development yesterday, F.B.I. scientists were looking into the possibility that a batch of ticks sent with an extortion letter to a Colorado insurance company might have been deliberately infected with deadly diseases. The letter to the Combined Insurance Company of America demanded payment to "B.A. Fox."
Other Letters Sent
 In reference to the ticks, the letter said: "The secret is that B.A. Fox has a fine bacteria lab, well stocked with various types of bacteria, viruses, germs—ranging from simple staph type infections up to and including rabies."
 It added that similar letters were being sent across the nation to remind company officials that an account owed to B.A. Fox is long, long overdue and must be paid immediately."

 In Paterson, N. J., Passaic county officials said that a former county investigator, Joseph Muccio, who received one of the letter bombs, might have been a target because of national attention he received in a double murder case in 1966.
 The packet, which contained ammonium nitrate pellets and a detonator and blasting cap, was recognized as a letter bomb and disarmed. County Prosecutor Burrell Humphries said that Mr. Muccio had not received an extortion threat.

Ol' Blue Eyes—the story behind the legend.

Now from America's best known columnist, Earl Wilson, comes the fascinating unauthorized inside story of America's most celebrated entertainer — Frank Sinatra.

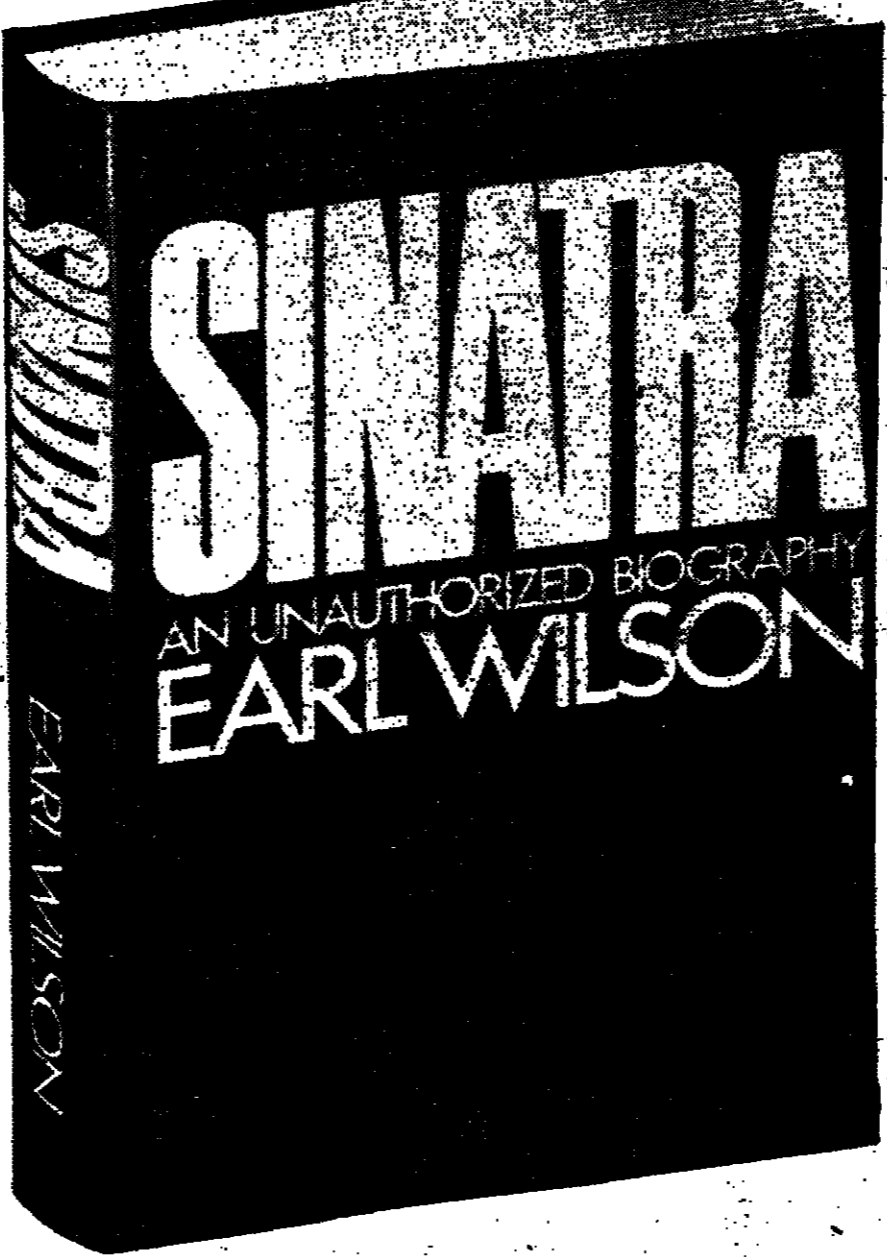

In a penetrating, no-holds-barred portrait, Wilson traces the ups and downs of Sinatra's turbulent career. The early days, when the King of Swoon wowed them as no one ever had. The songs, the movies. The nose-dives, and the triumphant comebacks that have made him one of our most enduring show business personalities.

A study in contradictions, here's a man with many sides. Some known, others not. The marriages and romances. The political involvements. The lawsuits, the brawls. It's all here.

And yet, this is the same man who gave away a private fortune in secret assistance to charities and people in trouble.

Read Sinatra, from a man who's been both his friend—and his enemy. Love him or hate him, no one can deny that Ol' Blue Eyes is the most exciting, intriguing performer America's ever known.

Official Says Louisville Resegregation to Grow

By PAUL DELANEY
Special to The New York Times

LE, Ky., June 16—Dr. Henning said the actions of the administration amounted to undermining the desegregation plan, which stipulated that 12 to 40 percent of students in schools throughout Jefferson County be black.

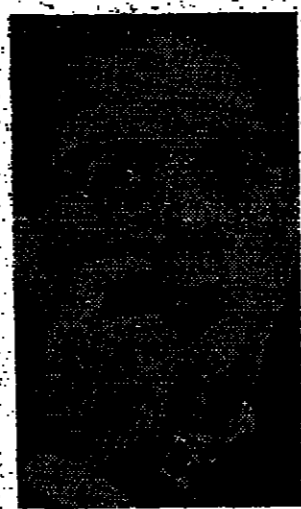

In testimony later in the day, Mr. Grayson, the superintendent, did not deny Dr. Henning's charges. But he tended to downplay the significance of the findings. He said he felt the data were "administrative in nature, designed to help the staff."

He did not share the information with Judge Gordon, he said, because the court had its own monitoring system.

Dr. Henning said the data showed that blacks were being suspended and assigned to special schools for problem students in disproportionately high numbers. Whites were being suspended out of predominantly black schools and predominantly white schools and disproportionately high rates.

The effect, he said, was to "trend upward" resegregation, in violation of Judge Gordon's orders. For example, only 388 of the 800 white students who were assigned to attend Shaw High School were still there by the end of the school year. The decrease was primarily a result of transfers, according to testimony by John Whiting, the principal.

Dr. Henning's studies showed similar patterns in at least 48 of the system's 161 schools. For example, only 160 of the 458 white pupils assigned to modify or change them."

It also contrasts with the impression recently given by statement and actions of the department.

The Justice Department gave serious consideration recently to intervening before the Supreme Court in the Boston school case with a friend-of-the-court brief that some criticized as inconsistent with earlier Supreme Court rulings, including the Court's ruling in the 1973 Denver school case.

Mr. Levi said today that he had said there should be a "rethinking of the law on busing, adding that 'perhaps what should have said is it needs thinking' rather than 'rethinking'."

Mr. Levi contended at one point, in answer to a question, that he did not think there was a "basic disagreement between me and the President" regarding busing.

People familiar with Mr. Levi's thinking on busing agreed, saying that Mr. Levi, like Mr. Ford, believes that busing should be used as little as possible in school cases, and that he also believes, as Mr. Ford appears to think, busing is a highly disruptive issue.

Mr. Levi made another statement today that appeared to back up this point.

After it became known that Mr. Levi was considering intervening in the Boston busing case, the White House announced that Mr. Ford met with Mr. Levi last November on the subject of busing and was given a "Presidential directive" to search for "an appropriate and proper case to ask the Court to re-examine busing as a remedy."

Mr. Levi today gave this account of the November meeting, suggesting that the idea for finding a test case had been initiated by the Attorney General.

"There was a meeting at the White House with the President at which the whole problem of busing and various aspects of that was discussed, and the position I took was I did not think this was a matter for constitutional amendment; that I did think one had to realize [that] the cases as I saw them were still developing—that doesn't mean I think they're going to go back I don't think they are, and I don't want them to."

"And I made that point at the meeting and said the department was looking for the appropriate case in which to help this development along."

Mr. Ford, Mr. Levi then said, "in making up his mind as a result of that meeting," directed that "various things be done," including the search for the test case.

Mr. Levi also said that the busing legislation being prepared by the Justice Department—involving a general five-year limit on busing orders after which busing would be allowed only in limited circumstances—would be constitutional.

The Esch amendment describes various alternative desegregation remedies that courts should consider before resorting to ordering busing, such as school assignments close to home, revision of attendance zones, construction of new schools and magnet schools. Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr., for instance, considered these before deciding that busing was necessary in Boston.

The first loan agreement you don't have to be a lawyer to understand.

Think about the last loan agreement you had to sign. Chances are, you never fully understood what you were signing. The document was just too long and complex. And filled with too many strange legal phrases. You just had to sign it. And hope for the best.

Citibank has changed all that. With the first loan agreement written for the layman instead of the lawyer. We've taken out the fine print. Removed the excess language. Eliminated the legal gibberish. And completely revised the format.

Everything is laid out clearly. In simple words we can all understand. So you know exactly what you have to do to keep your part of the loan bargain. And exactly what we have to do to keep ours.

The Citibank Simplified Loan Agreement. We think everybody has a right to know what he or she is signing. Even if you don't happen to be a lawyer.

The Interpretation of Dreams

By ANATOLE BROYARD

THE INN AND US. By Anne Edwards and Stephen Citron. 181 pages. Random House. $7.95.

It's an archetypal dream: You'll do your thing, put to work a particular talent you've been repressing all your life, and the world will beat a path to your door. You can see this impulse at its most pathetic in the sidestreets of Manhattan: a bookstore in the basement of a building in the middle of an untraveled block, an antiques shop with an attractively designed window display and nothing older or more interesting than a wooden rolling pin; a boutique featuring clothes that not even Manhattan girls are neurotic enough to buy.

The common feature of such enterprises is that they are entered into with love and faith. If you put enough love into the offering of your product, if you have faith in yourself and in the American public, how can you go wrong? In "The Inn and Us," Anne Edwards and Stephen Citron show you a hundred ways. In their dream, they were a success à l'estime and they still did not make it.

Stephen had taught American jazz in India and Slam, accompanied Edith Piaf on the piano, composed musical scores, given piano lessons in his studio at Carnegie Hall and played nightly in New York City gimmicks and Parisian hotspots. His six-year marriage to a sculptor was shaky when he proposed to open a combination inn and gallery in Stockbridge, Mass., near Tanglewood. The idea came to him when, during a visit to Massachusetts, he watched his 9-year-old son free in a green field. Perhaps, he thought, if he transplanted his withering marriage to this Garden of Eden, it would re-root itself.

Runs Short of Money

It would be a French inn with music, a supper club for sophisticates. As a young man in Paris, Stephen had helped pay his room and board by cooking for his landlady, who first taught him how. Now he began by buying a large, collapsing, century-old house for $45,000 and naming it Orpheus Ascending. After raising every possible penny, he found that he still could not get the pool operating, afford a decent sound system for his piano and singing, or air-conditioning for the rooms on the third floor so that they could be rented.

He could not afford to hire professional help, either. His bartender was the beneficiary of a three-day course in that art; Laura, the chambermaid, was a near mute who cried at any contretemps; Doug, the handyman, was a nature freak who refused to cut off the oak branch that kept people from seeing their sign. Their waitress quit after a couple of days because, in her opinion, there was just not enough money to be made at Orpheus Ascending. On the first crowded night, their bartender abandoned the bar because he "just couldn't cope with that many people." Stephen solved this problem by inviting everyone to be his own bartender and the crowd loved it.

Under Stephen's supervision, a girl named Rebecca served as chef. When she took ill, he hired Alice Brock, who had formerly owned the Alice's Restaurant that was featured in the movie of that name. She cooked rice, pasta and beans and served them up with French titles. The hotel survived, but Stephen's marriage did not. When he met Anne Edwards, a novelist who was a survivor of two divorces, they fell in love and she became part of the dream.

Business began to boom. Leonard Bernstein and other famous musicians were frequent visitors. So was Norman Mailer and his wife, Carol. Carol had been a singer, and it was quickly arranged that she would perform in the dining room on Fridays. During her first night, a drunk made rude remarks, and Norman, in a rare attempt to use his head, butted the man. When this failed to silence the drunk, Norman invited him outside for another encounter and they ended up buying each other drinks, the drunk proclaiming that that old man with the gray hair had a mighty hard head.

The Reviews Are Good

During its first season, Orpheus Ascending was occupied to 80 percent of capacity. The "Lovers Guide to America," New York magazine and other journals gave it very good reviews. A whimsical young man who owned a stereo appliance business donated an elaborate new sound system. And Stephen's accountant told him that he had lost $14,216.58. Orpheus Ascending was a dream come true in what may be the real sense of that expression.

Written in separate sections by Anne and Stephen, "The Inn and Us" is reasonably entertaining on the surface and more than that if you go deeper. On the second level, it is an astringent comment on the American romance of the entrepreneur. Charm, it reminds us, does not always pay its way and cost-accounting applies to personality as well as to more-tangible commodities.

Orpheus Ascending, their accountant said, was a business, not a theatrical enterprise. If they wanted to have a personal salon, Anne and Stephen could not expect it to support itself. Raise the prices and cut the quality was his advice. During the second year, the inn lost $17,346.78. What was worse, its owners discovered that they had lost their privacy too. Being innkeepers was an all-day job. Nor did their dream include rude, hostile or boorish guests in their "home." They decided to sell out, assuming that a dream is salable.

Perhaps Orpheus Ascending was good therapy for Anne and Stephen. They had their dream and they analyzed it and re-entered reality with clearer heads. Whatever other purpose the inn served, it helped accelerate, in T. S. Eliot's phrase, "The exhaustion of the possibilities." There is nothing like an unexhausted possibility to put vertical wrinkles between your eyebrows.

Just good fiction, literature. Read it!

CB: Banding Together

By William Safire

LAS VEGAS, Nev., June 16—If my rug rats want to send 80-8's around the house, they can get me ears for Father's Day.

Which is to say, in the lingo of Citizens Band (CB) radio, that if my children want to convey their thanks and best wishes, they can get me a transmitter to break into the world of two-way radio.

The Citizens Band combines the fascination of the old-fashioned party-line telephone with the protection of anonymity. Basic equipment to transmit and receive runs $100 or so and anybody over 18 can get a license from the F.C.C. Then with your official call letters and a nickname of your choice, you're on the air. Curiously, it took the Arab oil boycott to make personal broadcasting a reality. With the imposition of a nationwide 55-miles-per-hour speed limit to conserve gas, and its sensible continuance to save lives, resourceful truck drivers took to the two-way radio to warn each other of speed traps by police cars.

Centuries ago, cockney pickpockets developed rhyming slang to confuse their pursuers: "Money" was encoded to "bread 'n' honey" (which is why money is called "bread" in slang today). In the same way, modern "gear jammers" (drivers frustrated by the unprovable "double nickel" (55 m.p.h.) worked out an argot to counter the "Smoke's in a brown paper bag" (a cop is a bear, or Smokey Bear, who sometimes hunts his speeding prey in an unmarked police car).

When cops began tuning into the Citizens Band, the law-stretching element of the drivers' communications faded, but a new subculture had been spawned. Country music, celebrated it, and Janis Dills in Nashville ("Sugar Britches" of "Guitar Town") put together a CB slang dictionary. The method of mobile intercommunication merged with the mystique of a Middle-American movement to become a craze.

Miss Dills' dictionary is near the top of the paperback best-seller list; distributors of magazines and books, meeting in convention in Las Vegas, are talking of ways to ride the rise of interest in Citizens Band radio with more books and specialty magazines. Six million CB sets are said to be in use today, F.C.C. applications are nearing a half-million per month, and some auto manufacturers are making CB an option in new models this fall.

Will this CB explosion become another hoodoo or transistorized calculator—another "this year's present"—for the country that has everything?

I think not; these ears have no walls. The owners of radio stations are worried for good reason: The Citizens Band will slice the growth out of their sets in use. Telephone companies have already lost a court fight and must face an unexpected source of competition.

The reason Citizens Band radio will not fade is that it answers the need to answer: Newspapers, recognizing this pent-up desire to talk back, have expanded their letters-to-the-editor columns; radio stations have featured listener call-ins on discussion shows; on television, "60 Minutes" wisely makes much of its viewers' comments.

But that is only representative reaction, not the audience's longed-for two-way communication. The lonely crowd wants company. A human being is not merely a receiver. Behind locked doors in cities, behind locked cliques in suburbs, behind the lock of isolation in rural areas, individuals want to say—with no loss of safety or privacy—"Hello, I'm me; let's talk about something."

In CB language that message could be: "Break 10. This is KHT 1776, the Washington multiple, do you read me?" More likely than not, somebody out there locally, within a few miles—will answer, and neighbors can have a conversation, knowing that others are listening in. No lonely-hearts club.

ESSAY

No singles bar, no intermediary needed. So far, a slow-home etiquette dominates the CB airwaves. People call each other "good buddy" and expletives are replaced with an ironic, "mercy sakes." People who talk longer than the allotted five minutes are called "tatchet jaws" and soon get the message. Calls for help are heard and reported to police.

But forget about truck drivers' lingo, the love of a new toy, the sudden exploitation of a new craze. Think about the answer offered to people starved for company by this safe, private, local two-way communication. And not just to the lonely driver, or to the aged or the handicapped—but to all the people who do not meet anybody "new," or who are shy, or who have been told by relatives that they are pests.

Here is a beginning of a personal medium which will—in a generation—be as important as any mass medium is today: for back-fence gossiping; for word-of-mouth selling; for citizen participation in fighting crime without getting overly "involved"; for remote parental control; for two-step opinion formation. But let me not sell off into "I see a day." Here and now, we will find imaginative new uses for this most democratic intercourse. On Election Day this year, I'll be "on the side" (monitoring the channel) when some woman will say, "I would be voting for Reagan today, but I've got nobody to watch the kids." I'll mash my mike button and say, "Breakety break, this is KHT 1776. I'll be right over, lady—and it's 80-8's around the house."

Divestiture: blueprint for disaster

How 8 Senators Ignored overwhelming evidence.

Two days ago, a bare majority of the Senate Judiciary Committee—eight out of 15 members—voted to send to the full Senate a bill to destroy America's 18 largest oil companies. We know of no instance when overwhelming evidence has been so arrogantly ignored.

Of some 80 non-government witnesses who testified at the subcommittee hearings on Senate Bill 2387, only two favored the concept: Two!

Arrayed against divestiture were some of America's most highly regarded economists, investment bankers and academicians. Even long-time critics of the oil industry and representatives of the smaller "independent" oil companies that divestiture is supposed to help.

Their message? Smashing the largest oil companies will make the U.S. increasingly dependent on insecure foreign oil; raise prices to you, the consumer; jeopardize jobs, and threaten the economic well-being of the nation.

Listen to the critics:

Mr. A. Adelman, Professor of Economics, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, with whom we have often disagreed: "Vertical divestiture would keep Congress and the oil industry busy for years, spinning their wheels, going no place, postponing investment decisions, losing a chance for active defense against the OPEC cartel...."

Paul Frankel, British petroleum economist: "Vertical integration is the natural habitat of risky, high-investment industries...."

Senator Adlai Stevenson (D-Ill.), who voted for divestiture last year. The smaller divested companies "... may be in a weaker position from which to bargain with foreign producers for supplies at reasonable prices...."

Now listen to some independents:

Richard J. Boushka, President, Vickers Energy Corp.: "We, as one of the intended beneficiaries, might suffer a fate worse than those who are forced to divest...."

Otis H. Ellis, former consultant to the National Oil Jobbers Council, a federation of independent gasoline wholesalers: "... such legislation ... would leave the vast majority of independent marketers ... at some point between tragedy and disaster."

Here's what government officials said:

Gerald L. Parsky, Assistant Secretary of Treasury: "... with divestiture, it is more likely that domestic prices will increase instead of decrease, and that domestic energy supplies will decline rather than rise...."

Roger E. Shields, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense: "... the bill would be highly detrimental to the nation's security and its defense...."

Don Paarlberg, economist, Department of Agriculture: "Disruption caused by divestiture would impact not only at the farm level, but on through the economy...."

Julius L. Katz, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State: "While divestiture might cause certain temporary problems of disruptions for OPEC during the transition period, OPEC's control over the world market might in the end be even more complete than at present."

And from the campus:

Professor Neil H. Jacoby, economist, U.C.L.A. Divestiture "... would lead to higher-priced petroleum products, would increase dependence on foreign energy [and] would strengthen and prolong the effectiveness of the OPEC cartel...."

When the bill comes before the full Senate, we sincerely hope that passion and politicking will yield to reason. Divestiture makes no sense. It is no substitute for forging a sensible national energy policy to increase America's energy independence—the task Congress has thus far lacked the political courage to tackle.

If some politicians won't listen to reason, perhaps they'll listen to the people. What's needed now is a public outcry. Isn't it time you spoke up? Your future may depend on it.

Man Asks Judge Not to Send Him Prison for Nursing Home Frauds

AN L. HESS, the nursing home operator, appealed to a judge yesterday not to send him to prison for his conviction of nursing home fraud.

Mr. Hess, with his voice hoarse and eyes more sunken than ever, pleaded for mercy. He expressed his remorse in a letter to Judge Marvin Wever, who had sentenced him to a year in prison.

Justice Aloysius Meia of the State Supreme Court in Manhattan dismissed the complaint against Mr. Hess, but Charles J. Hayes, the special prosecutor for nursing home fraud, has filed notice of appeal. Justice Meia has withheld sentencing of Mr. Hess from pending the Federal sentence and resolution of the restitution question.

Mr. Friedman told the court yesterday that Mr. Hess had cooperated with the prosecution in testifying about his relationships with politicians, adding that Mr. Hess had excused the operator from paying restitution. Mr. Hess, another of Mr. Bergman's lawyers, revealed that he had offered to pay back about one-third of a million dollars.

The New York State Health Department has claimed overpayments of more than $2 million for capital costs alone at Mr. Bergman's Park Crescent Nursing Home at 87th Street and Riverside Drive in Manhattan. Other large claims are pending for allegedly padded operating costs at the Park Crescent and the now closed Towers Nursing Home, at 106th Street and Central Park West.

Following plea bargaining, Mr. Hess pleaded guilty to three counts of operating a nursing home with a state indictment alleging that he had bribed Albert R. Blumenthal, the Assembly majority leader, to obtain his license for the Park Crescent. In return, he and his family were granted immunity from further prosecution as a failure to

Approval Seen for Listing of Legal Fees

By TOM GOLDSTEIN

The New York State bar Association is expected to revise its rules on ethics this weekend to permit, for the first time, limited advertising by lawyers of their fees.

Under the proposal, any of the state's 60,000 lawyers would be allowed to publish in a directory of lawyers, the fee for an initial consultation with a client.

This change would not go so far as amendments already passed by the American Bar Association and many state bar groups that would permit some forms of advertising by lawyers in the Yellow Pages of telephone directories.

Court Approves Special Lottery For $1.7 Million Left in 1975

By DENA KLEIMAN

In a reversal of an earlier decision, a State Supreme Court justice ruled yesterday that special state lottery drawings could be conducted to distribute more than $1.7 million in prize money that had not been awarded when the lottery was suspended last October.

Justice Abraham J. Gellinoff, who last May 14 enjoined the drawings on the ground that winners could be chosen from unsold tickets, explained his reversal by new affidavits submitted by the state, which clarified the complicated theory behind the drawings and proposed new procedures in carrying them out.

Yesterday's ruling paves the way for completing the distribution of prize money from the "Double Up" and "Colossus" lotteries, which were suspended by Governor Carey after it was discovered that hundreds of duplicate tickets had been printed for a special drawing.

"The court sees no reason why the lottery should not be promptly reinstated," said Justice Gellinoff in a three-page decision referring to the special make-up drawings.

John Quinn, director of the State Lottery Division, expressed pleasure at the decision. He said the first of the drawings would take place in the week starting June 28. The revamped weekly lottery will begin late in August.

The New York State bar group's House of Delegates, which is meeting Saturday in Cooperstown, is also expected to establish a special committee to recommend ways of better informing the public of the availability of legal services.

Last February the American Bar Association rewrote sections of the lawyer's Code of Professional Responsibility to permit lawyers to buy display advertisements in the Yellow Pages.

State bar associations have the option of adopting these changes, and many state groups have done so.

But a report submitted to the New York bar association's House of Delegates said information about lawyers' fees should not be permitted in telephone directories or other commercial media.

The report, prepared by a 13-member committee, asserted that "the vast majority of lawyers and bar associations in New York State, especially in the nonmetropolitan areas are strongly opposed to any relaxation of restrictions on lawyer advertising."

Under the present state code a lawyer can list only his address and telephone number on professional cards and letterheads and in telephone directories.

In approved lawyer directories, mostly circulated to other lawyers, a lawyer can list brief biographical data, the field in which he concentrates and names of clients he regularly represents.

The report by the state bar's special committee to review the Code of Professional Responsibility, which is expected to be adopted Saturday, said fees for initial consultations should be added to that list.

"To permit more would encourage abuses that could be highly injurious to the public," nine of the 13 committee members said.

The four dissenters said they believed that "if the bar does not move promptly and responsibly in this area, mindful of the needs of the public, the area will be regulated by others, and

Harlem Group Urges City To Run Torn School Area

By THOMAS A. JOHNSON

A coalition of Harlem elected officials and parents groups has urged the New York City Board of Education to appoint trustees to run the embattled Community School District No. 5 and to dismiss the eight-member elected school board.

Community parents from 15 of the district's 23 schools took control of the district's 5 headquarters at 433 West 123d Street on June 7 to dramatize their requests. They have been conducting a sit-in since then.

The requests by the parents and political leaders followed a 5-to-1 vote by the school board last May 27 to replace the district's superintendent, Luther W. Seabrook. Appointed last September, Mr. Seabrook was the seventh superintendent in the district in the last five years.

The coalition has called Mr. Seabrook's dismissal illegal. It is seeking to reinstate him.

In a related move, three school board members who favor Mr. Seabrook's retention last Monday filed a grievance with the Board of Education alleging that the May 27 vote was illegal.

The grievance is being considered by the Board of Education's division of School District Affairs.

The community school board officials gave no reason during the May 27 meeting for dismissing Mr. Seabrook. Ignoring the dissenting shouts of some 200 parents, the board members declared that the superintendent's position was "vacant" as of July 1, 1976, and open to all qualified applicants.

One board member, John Davis, a Seabrook supporter, told a newsman following the meeting that the Seabrook opponents had agreed to their action at about 6 P.M., two hours before the scheduled meeting.

Several parents have complained that they never knew that the board was even considering the replacement of the superintendent.

Betty Washington, one of the more than 100 persons occupying the District 5 offices yesterday, said the sit-in had been started "because we could not get any of those five board members to talk to us."

Assemblyman George W. Miller, Democrat of Manhattan, said he suspected that the dismissal of Mr. Seabrook was "a political thing and not a matter of his competence."

"I have heard from educators and from parents that Mr. Seabrook has done an excellent job under some adverse conditions," Mr. Miller added.

The parents conducting the sit-in agreed with this assessment.

"With Mr. Seabrook, our children were making progress, real progress, for the first time," said Gloria Codrington, president of the Parents Association of Community School 194. "We parents feel that they tried to get rid of him because he stood up like a man and tried to do an honest job."

Planners Hear Landmark Hotel Plan

By GLENN FOWLER

A controversial proposal by Harry B. Helmsley, the realty developer, to erect a $65 million luxury hotel behind the landmark Villard Houses on Madison Avenue received conditional backing from architects, business and civic groups at a City Planning Commission hearing yesterday.

The hearing drew protests from several members of Community Board 5, who argued that they had been given insufficient time to study the latest plans for the skyscraper, drawn up by architects giving their backing to plans for the new hotel but expressed varying reservations about the zoning amendments applying to all landmark sites.

From another point of view, spokesmen for labor and management in the construction and hotel industries argued for city approval of the new hotel to provide jobs and to help the city's tourist trade.

The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, which owns the Villard Houses and has optioned the property to Mr. Helmsley, urged several changes in the legislation to facilitate the use of landmarks without unduly obligating the developer.

The Planning Commission will take further testimony on the Villard project at its next meeting, on June 30.

Two hundred residents of the north shore of Queens appeared before the Planning Commission yesterday to protest zoning changes that would allow construction of 500 town houses and apartment units on a waterfront tract in Colee Point and development of 80 two-family houses in the neighboring shorefront community of Beachhurst.

The commission approved, subject to final action by the Board of Estimate, a permit for a seaplane base at 34th Street and the East River. When operations start, the present seaplane facility at 23d Street will be discontinued.

The commission also approved zoning changes to allow construction of Essex House on Central Park South to convert some of its transient hotel rooms into condominium apartments.

New Head Is Elected By Southern Baptists

The Rev. Dr. James Sullivan, retired head of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, was elected president yesterday of the Southern Baptist Convention, whose 12.7 million members comprise the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

Well-known in Baptist circles, Dr. Sullivan, who lives in Nashville, was chosen after Dr. Adrian Rogers, the overwhelming favorite of ultra-conservatives attending the annual meeting in Norfolk, Va., withdrew "because the Lord has spoken in my heart" against his candidacy. Dr. Sullivan is considered a moderate.

There were more than 18,000 "messengers" assembled for the denomination's annual meeting. Southern Baptists and their beliefs have been much in the news lately because former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia, the probable Democratic Presidential nominee, is a member of the denomination.

Today's "first woman" story concerns Dr. Sarah Kerr Myers, who yesterday became the first woman to be named director of the American Geographical Society in its 124-year history. Dr. Myers, who has served as editor of the society's quarterly Geographical Review since 1973, succeeds Dr. Robert B. McNeese, who is turning to the University of Cincinnati as a professor of geography.

It took an act of Congress, but as of yesterday, Hope Cooke Namgyal, the United States-born wife of the deposed King of Sikkim, Chogyal Palden Thondup Namgyal, is once again entitled to permanent residence in this country. President Jimmy Carter yesterday signed a bill granting residence to the former Queen, who renounced her citizenship in March of 1963, a few days after marrying the King. She now lives in seclusion in New York, fearful, it is said, that her 12-year-old son and 8-year-old daughter may be kidnapped by her husband's enemies.

The King is now under house arrest, imposed by the Indian Government last year when it annexed his tiny Himalayan border nation.

Bucharest is sending a new Rumanian Ambassador to Washington, in the person of Nicolae M. Nicolae, a specialist in economics, succeeding Corneliu Bogdan, who has been recalled.

Dr. Frederick Seitz, president of Rockefeller University since 1968, said yesterday that he would retire after a successor for him had been appointed. Dr. Seitz will be 65 years old on July 4, the official age for retirement of university personnel. Patrick E. Bagey, board chairman of Rockefeller University, said he would appoint a presidential search committee to find someone of Dr. Seitz' talents to succeed him, but he thought it would take a year for the committee to complete its task.

The Troubles of Garry Davis (continued): The self-styled "world citizen" boarded a Trans World Airlines jet in Tel Aviv Tuesday, after difficulties there, and planned to fly to New York via Paris. But the airport police in Paris said yesterday that they had confiscated Mr. Davis' "World Service Authority" passport, along with 127 blank ones, as well as some blank birth certificates and other documents. Mr. Davis was refused permission to continue to New York, where he planned, he said, to be a world-citizen candidate for the United States Presidency. He was charged with counterfeiting documents.

At the request of Richard M. Nixon, the former President, a three-judge Federal panel in Washington yesterday ordered that a hand-made flag fashioned from tatters by a prisoner of war who spent six years in captivity in Vietnam be returned to the Philadelphia-born veteran so that he might carry it in a July 4 parade. The flag, presented to Mr. Nixon while he was President, was in the collection of documents and memorabilia in the Government for inspection to discern whether there was any Watergate-related material in it. Lieut. Col. John Dramessi, who made the flag, will have to return it to the archives by Sept. 15.

"You can't go into a coal mine without a chapeau of tobacco," a Bureau of Mines official told Secretary of the Interior Thomas S. Kleppe yesterday. So Mr. Kleppe, who is now in his mouth before descending into a mine in Washington County, Pa. It turned out that Mr. Kleppe, who had donned overall, safety shoes and hard hat before embarking on his first mine inspection, was not a stranger to tobacco-chewing. He did it when he played baseball 30 years ago.

HECHT TO RESIGN; SEEKS JUDGESHIP

Assembly Ways and Means Head Declines 8th Term

By LINDA GREENHOUSE
Special to The New York Times

ALBANY, June 16—Assemblyman Burton G. Hecht, who as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee holds the third most powerful leadership post in the Assembly, has decided to run for a Civil Court judgeship in the Bronx rather than seek re-election to an eighth Assembly term.

"Fourteen years are enough," Mr. Hecht, a 48-year-old Bronx Democrat, said today. "My ambition has always been to be a judge."

Mr. Hecht's retirement will leave vacant four of the 10 positions in the Assembly, even before the primary and special elections take their toll. The 17 Assemblymen who are leaving voluntarily include Albert H. Blumenthal of Manhattan, the majority leader, who is returning to private law practice after 14 years here; John S. Thorpe Jr. of Rockville Centre, L.I., chairman of the Judiciary Committee, who has been named to a seat on the Nassau County Court, and Thomas W. Brown of Albany, chairman of the Democratic Conference, also returning to his law practice.

Mr. Hecht's decision to seek the bench had been rumored for weeks. He made the decision over the weekend and received the Democratic designation in a telephone poll of county committee members. The countywide seat he is running for is now vacant.

Reached at his Manhattan law office, Mr. Hecht said his two main reasons for leaving the Assembly were his desire to spend more time with his family—he has two teenagers at home—and his weariness at what he called the public abuse directed at the Legislature.

"A lot of the criticism is unfair," he said. "I guess I'm not as thick-skinned as I thought I was."

Highly Regarded
Mr. Hecht was not the personal target of criticism. He is one of the more popular members of the Assembly, and colleagues said today that his low-key, almost offhand, manner, concealed an admirable political shrewdness and grasp of the issues.

A product of the regular Democratic organization in the Bronx, he is a political ally of Patrick J. Cunningham, the Bronx Democratic leader, and his administration of the Ways and Means Committee, the most powerful committee in the Assembly, was essentially a political. For example, he gave the committee's top staff member, John L. Hardy, a free hand in hiring staff members.

Mr. Hecht's most likely successor as chairman is Arthur J. Kramer of Long Beach, L.I., who is now the vice chairman and is actively interested in the job.

But legislative sources said that the Ways and Means chairmanship would depend on how the other vacancies were filled, in what is certain to be a major realignment after the November election.

There will be a primary for the Democratic nomination in Mr. Hecht's 83d Assembly District between George Friedman, now a counsel to the Ways and Means Committee, who has the endorsement of the regular organization, and Joseph Meyer, a college teacher.

Always a key committee, Ways and Means gained even more importance during Mr. Hecht's two-year tenure as chairman, both because of the fiscal crisis and because of a procedural change under which all committees continue to function until the end of the session.

3 Democrats Win Endorsement For Surrogate by Other Parties

By THOMAS P. RONAN

The Liberal Party has endorsed Democrats for the Surrogate's Courts in Manhattan and Brooklyn, and the Republicans have endorsed a different Democrat in Brooklyn and are running a member of their own party in Manhattan.

The Liberals' Manhattan organization named Justice Samuel A. Spiegel of the State Supreme Court, who is in a four-way race for his own party's nomination. His Democratic opponent is E. Blyn of the Civil Court and Marie M. Lambert, president of the New York State Trial Lawyers Association.

In Brooklyn the Liberals endorsed Daniel Eisenberg, former president of the Brooklyn Law Association, and the Republicans named Bernard Bloom, a district leader and former deputy public administrator in the surrogate's office.

Mr. Bloom is the Brooklyn Democratic organization's choice for the party nomination, but he is opposed for it by both Mr. Eisenberg and Judge Abraham Schulman of the Civil Court, who has the backing of the antiother organizations County Democratic Coalition.

Whatever the outcome of the Democratic primaries, Justice Spiegel and Mr. Eisenberg are assured of the Liberal line and Mr. Bloom of the Republican line on the ballot in the November election since they had no opposition for those nominations.

In Manhattan, the Republican organization designated Justice Shirley W. Kram of the Family Court for surrogate. She had no opposition for the Republican nomination.

The Manhattan Democratic organization has taken no stand on its party primary, but Judge Blyn has the support of the New Democratic Coalition.

The Conservatives have yet to designate candidates for the surrogate posts being vacated by S. Samuel D. Falco in Manhattan and Nathan R. Sobel in Brooklyn on reaching the mandatory retirement age of 70.

Surrogates, elected for 14 years at a salary of $48,998 a year, have access to considerable political patronage because they appoint lawyers to handle estates and guardianships. But virtually all the current candidates are pledged to seek reforms in court procedures.

A 2 1/2-Hour Strike Is Ended At Trust Company of Jersey

JERSEY CITY, June 16 (UPI)—Tellers, clerks and secretaries for the Trust Company of New Jersey have returned to work following a two-and-a-half-hour strike that closed 18 of the bank's offices in four counties.

The contract agreement reached yesterday gives the 400 workers, represented by Local 142 of the Office and Professional Employees International Union, a $12-a-week raise in each year of a two-year contract.

The workers will also receive a bonus this year of $150 in lieu of a cost-of-living increase and will receive an additional personal holiday annually and a major medical insurance plan.

The bank kept its doors closed for two hours yesterday morning and executives staffed teller windows for 30 minutes until the union members returned to work.

The strikers set up picket lines at the bank's main office on Journal Square here and at 17 branch offices in Bergen, Essex, Hudson and Passaic counties.

Angela Nunziata frets about emotional impact of tests on her child.

"I was devastated that a manmade factor that might have been avoided could cause cancer in my child," said one mother who, during pregnancy, had been given a synthetic hormone known as DES.

Repercussions of a Drug: An Ordeal for Mothers And Their Daughters —And Maybe Sons, Too

Andrea Rago "cried for two years" when told she had been given DES.

By NADINE BROZAN
Andrea Rago of Levittown, Pa., pregnant in 1970 with her first child, had her obstetrician handed her a prescription for what she assumed to be a harmless drug. It was DES, a synthetic hormone known as diethylstilbestrol. She immediately stopped her regular of allergy shots and refused to take aspirin for minor ailments. Fully three months, she thought, would help her have the perfect baby. But in March 1971, she learned the doctor only do what was good for me, she lied recently.

By the seventh month, Mrs. Rago fell and thought she was in for a miscarriage, so she was hospitalized for a short period. Two months after the birth of her daughter, Mrs. Rago read a newspaper article linking a synthetic drug called diethylstilbestrol (commonly known as DES or DES-9) to a form of vaginal cancer. She began to turn up in teen-agers of women who had taken DES during pregnancy. She remembered the threatened miscarriage. Mrs. Rago said, "so I asked my doctor if he had given me DES in my month. He said, 'No, but I did so you for the first three months.' For two years after that.

"I was devastated that a manmade factor that might have been avoided could cause cancer in my child," Mrs. Rago said as she prepared to attend a recent meeting of DES-WATCH, a group of Long Island mothers and daughters who had been exposed to the drug. At least 500,000 and possibly as many as 2 million women in this country were given the same drug from the 1940's to the early 1970's, in the belief that it would help them maintain tenous pregnancies. Although evidence began to accumulate as early as 1951 that DES was ineffective in saving fetuses, the debate over its usefulness continued and physicians prescribed it, albeit with decreasing frequency, into the beginning of this decade.

Reasons Were Given
Four of the women at the DES-WATCH meeting, which took place in a Jericho L. I. home, had taken it during pregnancies in 1970 and 1971. Except for Mrs. Rago, they had all been told it was necessary to stop staining, sometimes a symptom of an oncoming miscarriage. Mrs. Rago herself had not experienced any bleeding, nor did she have a background of problems, when she was given the drug. She later learned that the drug had been prescribed because she had had trouble conceiving and doctors were afraid she might miscarry. In 1971, the theory that while DES may not have salvaged threatened pregnancies, it was not dangerous, was punctured by the diagnosis of clear-cell adenocarcinoma of the vagina in eight New England women, ages 14 to 22. Adenocarcinoma is a cancer of the glands. Besides the disease, the patients shared a common history: In seven of the cases, the mothers had taken DES; the eighth had taken a similar hormonal drug. Since then, the use of DES during pregnancy has generated action on many fronts. Physicians are debating the treatment for nonmalignant abnormalities related to the drug, the Government is financing research, lawyers are filing individual and class action lawsuits and women are organizing activist groups. The DES matter has raised a catalogue of issues ranging from patients' rights to their old records—"Every other doctor seems to have had a fire in his office," said Frances Rowan of Hicksville, L. I., founder of DES-WATCH—to the responsibility of the drug industry for the first known type of transplacental cancer. As Paul Rheingold, a Manhattan lawyer who has handled several of the lawsuits, explained, "This is one of the most complicated forms of drug case because you're talking about something used long ago, where the damage shows up later in another individual." Dr. Leonard Kurland of the Mayo Clinic, who is coordinating the National Cancer Institute-financed projects that will ultimately study 3,000 women in four major medical centers, summed up the prognosis for those whose mothers took DES: "We just don't know what proportion of the millions exposed are at risk. Even if in five years there is nothing significant, that does not mean we're out of the woods. It would be desirable to follow these women (the oldest of whom is no more than 35) until menopause." Just what has been established about the hazards of DES taken in pregnancy? The original connection between DES and the eight vaginal cancers has been corroborated by the maintenance at Massachusetts General Hospital of an international registry of clear-cell adenocarcinoma. The 5-year-old registry currently contains the names of about 280 patients in this country and abroad, 10 of whom have died of the disease. Of the 200 to 220 cases that have been thoroughly investigated, "Approximately two-thirds have been associated with DES or similar compounds," said Dr. Arthur L. Herbst, who, with colleagues at the hospital, published the initial findings and created the registry. Dr. Herbst is now chairman of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Chicago Pritzker School of Medicine. He stated the incidence of the cancer is statistically rare—one case for every thousand women born to mothers who took DES is the most commonly accepted figure—benign conditions are seen in a much higher proportion of DES daughters. Vaginal adenosis, the presence in the vagina of glands normally found only in the cervix and uterus, is by far the most prevalent defect. Many physicians simply keep a close watch on it, others freeze or cauterize the area, and a few are said to perform vaginectomies. Underlying trepidation about adenosis is uncertainty about whether or not it is precancerous. "This is a controversial question with no answers yet," said Dr. Mary Ann Sestili, DES project officer for the National Cancer Institute's division of cancer control and rehabilitation. "Many doctors are concerned because every time they do see a carcinoma, they see adenosis associated with it." In fact, Dr. Kurland explained, the purpose of monitoring DES daughters at the centers at Massachusetts General Hospital, the Mayo Clinic, the Baylor College of Medicine and the University of Southern California "is to determine the outcome of vaginal epithelial changes—if a woman already has adenocarcinoma, she is not eligible for the study." So far, not a single case of adenocarcinoma has been found in the current study population of 2,708 women, including 74 control subjects, but the centers have been enrolling subjects only since March 1975. Until two years ago, clear-cell adenocarcinoma was the only form of cancer to be associated with DES. Now there are suspicions that the drug may also play a role in squamous cell cancer (cancer of the skin lining the vagina and covering the outside of the cervix). Dr. William Fetherston, a specialist in tumors of the pelvic area and chairman of gynecology at St. Mary's Hospital in Milwaukee, said, "We have observed some changes in the squamous cells that could lead to cancer, and a few people have developed mild types of squamous cancer that are curable if noticed in time." "Only Time Will Tell" "We would think that there is a distinct danger that squamous cancer of the vagina will be a problem in the future for DES patients, but only time will tell." While parents of daughters have lived with anguish and anger, those who had sons had, until recently, no cause for worry. However, a project currently under way at the Chicago Lying-In Hospital that will survey 450 boys born during a study of DES there two decades ago is beginning to divulge such genital abnormalities as cysts, oversized testicles and potential infertility. Of the 31 DES-exposed males who have already undergone semen analyses, 10 have had low sperm counts, low sperm motility and misshapen sperm. None of these defects were evident in tests on a control group. "There is a high probability that a significant number of these men will be infertile," said Dr. William Gill, a member of the research team. "But most of them are still in their early 20's, so it will be a decade before we know the infertility rates." Research advances notwithstanding, mothers have felt sufficiently aroused to organize DES committees to agitate for further action, to alert women who may not realize they took the drug or were exposed to it and to offer one another emotional support. Such groups are now active in Boston, Long Island, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Mount Pleasant, Mich., and Springfield, Ill. They are angered by unanswered questions, and by the unwillingness of physicians to reach patients who took DES and the Government to ban its use (it has been approved for the morning-after contraceptive). So far a loose alliance of California groups has had the greatest success in prodding the state health department to publish material alerting women and doctors and to offer physicians one-day training courses in the use of the colposcope, an instrument that gives a magnified view of the vagina. "This is just the beginning," said Patricia Cody of Berkeley, Calif., a leader of the movement there. "We want funding for DES daughters. Why should my daughter, who has adenosis, have to pay for examinations for the rest of her life? [The present fee for examinations, required at least every six months to a year, ranges from about $50 to $100.] I see this as a feminist and a health issue. It represents the way women have been treated by doctors who say, 'I'm in charge, you do what I tell you.'" That's precisely what happened to Angela Nunziata of Wantagh, L. I., who balked when her obstetrician prescribed DES to combat the staining that occurred early in her pregnancy with a daughter, now 15. "I remember asking him if a miscarriage might not be nature's way of getting rid of an imperfect fetus," she recalled at the DES-WATCH meeting. "He told me, 'It's not the baby, it's you. You're deficient in hormones.' So I took four pills a day with such confidence that they would help me keep my baby. Two years later, when I became pregnant again [with a son], the doctor said, 'As long as you had trouble the first time, why don't you take it again?' So I did—right up to the moment I went to the delivery room. "When my daughter had her first Pap smear at age 11, she told me, 'I'd rather die of cancer than go through that again.' And after an examination several years later, she asked me, 'Mommy, is this what sex is like?' "I don't know what fears she is harboring, and I worry more about emotional scars than about cancer," Mrs. Nunziata said. "The only way I have been able to get her to the doctor has been to cry and tell her, 'I would do this for you because I love you. Please do it for me because you love me.'"

Wine, Women and Uneducated Palates

By BARBARA MacLAURIN
Special to The New York Times
PARIS, June 16—Under normal circumstances, the steward presents the bottle of wine to the male diner, who tastes the wine and approves it ceremoniously with a nod. But that exclusive male role faces a challenge as many American women in Paris are tasting wines—seriously and analytically.
One place where this is going on is the P.L.M. St. Jacques Hotel, where Mary Berley swirled a young bordeaux around in her glass the other day to release its aroma for a group of tourists taking her wine appreciation course.
"A nice little wine, a little aqueous," she decided on the first sip.
Mrs. Berley, an American, was just back from a three-day finishing course in Bordeaux at Chateau Lafite-Rothschild. While there she was also guided around other famous chateaus, including Haut-Brion, Latour and Beycheville, her escort being the wine connoisseur
Guy Schyler, once proprietor of Chateau Margaux.
But she learned most of her wine from Raymond Cordier, who was head barman and wine director aboard the Normandie and the Franco for 40 years, and will be helping with Mrs. Berley's courses.
"I became interested in wines years ago when my husband and I found a nice French restaurant in Chicago without a liquor license and we had to bring our own wine," Mrs. Berley said. "We started wondering which wines to bring.
I remember then always being intimidated by wine stewards waiting for our approval of a wine, all we could do was smile and say, 'fine thanks.'"
"I met Raymond when we moved to France seven years ago on the Franco.
I spent most of the trip learning about wine tasting with him. I kept my knowledge under cover for a while. I didn't think my husband would appreciate it.
A few years later, after much reading and a lot of wine drinking I took friends to Maxim's for dinner and upset the husband by choosing the wine myself."
"But it wasn't really my choosing the wine that upset him; it was my talking to the wine steward and being asked to do the tasting in a restaurant."
Her course is given in two one-and-a-half-hour evening sessions. The first night is an examination of red, white and rose wines with some of their history, explanations of how they are made and why they are different.

The second night is a tasting of two wines from each of the seven wine regions of France. The course costs $20.
"The course won't make you an expert but it will give you enough confidence to want to know more," she said.
"Instead of bringing home perfume,
I think it's nice for women—and men—to come away from France knowing more about wine; it seems such an essential ingredient to living well."
Another place where women are learning about wine tasting is the Académie du Vin, where 14 young women from Hollis College's junior year abroad program sat around the winetasting bar the other day.
"I want to learn to know wines because I've been drinking so much wine over here," Anne Riser, one of the students, said.

Her classmate, Gwynn Callis, is interested in getting her money's worth with wines. "If you don't know about wine anyone can sell you a lousy one for a good price," Miss Callis said.
The teacher for the course is Patricia Gallagher, another American, who has been giving lessons at the academy, which is off the Place de la Madeleine in the Cité Berriery, for three years.
"I'd like to see women take more initiative in picking and tasting wines," Miss Gallagher said. "For the moment it's mostly single women who really take an interest. A woman's taste impressions can be more concrete than a man's and, anyway, it's as rare to find a woman's taste as a tin ear."
"But the waiter will still pour the wine in the man's glass."

Jonathan Logan Planning To Expand in New York

By MICHAEL STERN

Jonathan Logan Inc., one of the nation's biggest apparel manufacturers, signed a 20-year lease yesterday for 150,000 square feet of space—the rough equivalent of a city block—for a major expansion in New York City of its Elmhurst Avenue handbag and shoe division.

The rental is one of the largest in recent years for manufacturing and distribution in Manhattan, activities that have been shrinking dramatically in the city. Aigier's new space will be at 111 Eighth Avenue, the former Port Authority Building that covers the full block from 15th to 18th Streets, Eighth to Ninth Avenues, and that now is owned and operated by Sylvan Lawrence Inc.

Aigier now has 400 employees crowded into 35,000 square feet on two floors of 45 West 18th Street. Its new space, almost three times the size of its present quarters, will permit it to add 200 people to its work force, to achieve many labor-saving economies and to continue its rapid growth.

The division makes handbags and distributes from New York City the shoes, belts and other leather goods it manufactures in Italy and Taiwan.

thought to be especially suitable for use with the sports clothes now favored by many women.

By moving into the old Port Authority building, the company will get many of the advantages New York manufacturers seek when they move to the suburbs. The building, erected in 1939, is, in effect, 15 small industrial parks stacked one on top of another.

It has exceptionally large floors of 185,000 square feet that cover a whole city block and that permit large-scale, horizontal flow operations on a single level.

In addition, each floor is served by two banks of heavy-duty elevators that permit trucks to be raised to loading and unloading bays adjacent to tenants' space. This eliminates the freight elevator traffic jams and pilfering problems that plague tenants in New York's typically small, older loft buildings.

The site also offers direct access to the building through underground arcades for employees using the IND Sixth and Eighth Avenue subway lines and the IRT Seventh Avenue subway line.

Explaining why he decided to keep Aigier here while other handbag makers have been moving thousands of jobs out of the city, Richard J. Schwartz, president of Jonathan Logan, said:

"This company always has been successful and efficient in New York, and so long as the city doesn't kill it with taxes, and services continue to be adequate, we see no reason to leave. We also feel a moral commitment to do what we can to strengthen the city's economy."

Sales Expanding

Manufacturing employment in New York City averaged 525,800 last year, only two-thirds the level of 828,800 recorded in 1969, the peak year for all city employment. The erosion of jobs in the handbag industry has been even sharper. Last year's average, 4,500, was less than half the 1969 level of 9,600. Industry sources say the principal cause of the decline has been competition from foreign manufacturers who employ cheaper labor.

Aigier has been able to do well here and to expand its sales from $4 million in 1973 to an anticipated level of $26 million this year because workers have been willing to pay whatever it costs to get its high-quality, distinctively styled products that carry an instantly recognizable status symbol—an "A" set in a horse-shoe-shaped brass emblem.

The concern's handbags, selling for $40 to $120, and its shoes and boots, for $30 to $70, often combine canvas and other fabrics with leather and are

Despite these advantages, however, renting has been slow since Sylvan Lawrence bought the building two and a half years ago, about the time the national recession began. Several major tenants went out of business, others moved, and about half of the building's 2.3 million square feet now is unlet.

Leon Grossman, senior vice president of Sylvan Lawrence, said one problem was the rent, pegged originally at $2.75 a square foot when other space, though less desirable, was available for as little as $1 a square foot. The company now has reduced its asking price to about $2.50 a square foot, with lower rates available for large, especially desirable tenants.

Neither Mr. Schwartz nor Mr. Grossman would disclose the terms of the Aigier lease, but sources close to the negotiations said it provided for payments of $10 million over the 20-year term, including rent escalations for higher taxes and other costs.

Mr. Schwartz said the rent was considerably higher than what Aigier had been paying on West 18th Street but it would be offset by savings to be achieved by more efficient operations. Mr. Grossman said Jonathan Logan "got a deal we wouldn't duplicate for anyone else, because of who they are, because of their strong financial position, and because we hope this will be a turnaround point for the building."

Period of Contraction

After a long period of contraction, Mr. Grossman said, manufacturing and distribution companies are beginning to expand again. He reported that his company now was writing leases for 400,000 square feet, in the Eighth Avenue building.

Jonathan Logan had sales of $320 million last year on the operations of its 64 knitting mills and factories in the United States and overseas. Except for the Aigier division, which it acquired in 1973, it has no manufacturing or distribution facilities in New York City. Its showrooms and offices are at 1411 Broadway, at 40th Street.

Mr. Schwartz acknowledged that the new lease and the $500,000 investment the company would be making in moving and re-equipping for expansion represented a risk. But he added: "We are hoping that conditions in the city will improve enough to justify this. If they don't we have a cancellation clause that lets us out of the lease, with a penalty, after five years."

The broker for the transaction was Robert Lonsheitz, vice president of the Williams Real Estate Company.

Moyrhan So 'Dazed' He Forgot the News

SPECIAL TO THE NEW YORK TIMES

WASHINGTON, June 16—Daniel F. Moyrhan, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Senator from New York, failed to keep a luncheon appointment here today with about 25 newsmen to discuss his candidacy.

He had completely "forgotten" the appointment, according to Geoffrey Sprengel of the Caristian Science Monitor, who arranged the luncheon. Mr. Moyrhan told him that he had been "dazed" for the last two days, the reporter told the luncheon guests after he spoke to Mr. Moyrhan, who was in New York City. The session was rescheduled for breakfast on Monday.

Mr. Moyrhan could not be reached for comment. Richard Blumenthal, his press secretary, said that he was unaware of the luncheon appointment, but added: "I'm sure he just forgot it."

2 Former Narcotics Detectives Are Sentenced to Prison Terms

Two members of the now disbanded Special Investigation Unit of the New York City Police Department's anti-narcotics unit were sentenced yesterday by Federal Judge John M. Candelaria to three months of one-year terms and to pay $1,000 fines.

The former detectives, Lawrence Hassell, 40 years old, of Stearn Island, and William McCrobie, 37, of Floral Park, L.I., had pleaded guilty to taking for themselves $3,500 of $4,000 they found when they raided the West End Avenue apartment of a Barnard College senior in 1970 and seized $100,000 in hashish, marijuana, LSD and other drugs.

The Barnard College student, accused of being a supplier of drugs to the Columbia University campus, was Andrea Rosenberg, an anthropology major who had made Phi Beta Kappa. She later pleaded guilty to a narcotics charge.

The investigation methods of the squad as being "Hitler-like" in commenting on the case before sentencing. The two former detectives denied responsibility for infractions of the law in making the investigation.

The narcotics squad members expressed apprehension over being jailed, possibly with men they had arrested. Judge Candelaria told them: "I'll do everything I can to insure your safety." He said the problem had arisen before and had been handled successfully by the Federal prison authorities.

Miss Rosenberg, also known as Andrea Ross, is now living in Beverly Hills, Calif. She was a witness against the detectives at the trial, which was halted by their pleas. The case aroused considerable interest because the grand jury that in 1972 investigated the circumstances surrounding the raid indicated the detectives involved in it on a charge of violating the prisoner's right of privacy.

The United States Attorney's Office said both former detectives had cooperated fully in the investigation of the methods used by the police in breaking up the campus drug rings. The arrest made by the police is said to have curbed trafficking in drugs on Morning-side Heights.

The Birmingham High School gym in Van Nuys, Calif., was turned into a bedroom for those evacuated by toxic fumes

Toxic Fumes From Fire Force Evacuation on Coast

By ROBERT LINDSEY
Special to The New York Times

VAN NUYS, Calif., June 16—More than 4,000 persons were forced from their homes last night after a swimming pool supply center caught fire and sent toxic chlorine fumes billowing over a large part of this San Fernando Valley community, a suburb of Los Angeles.

"It was horrible," said Jo Byford, who manages a trailer park populated mostly by trailer residents adjacent to the Pool Brite Manufacturing Company, where the fire broke out about 10 P.M.

"I got in your lungs, and people were choking," he especially hard on older citizens. "Everything smelled just like Chlorox, there was so much of it in the air you could taste it," Mrs. Byford said. She spurned firemen's appeals to evacuate and stayed in the trailer park to prevent looting.

More than 50 persons, including 24 firemen and several policemen, were treated at hospitals. Many complained of difficulty in breathing, vomiting and nausea after inhaling the fumes. One trailer camp resident suffered an apparent heart attack during the evacuation.

When firemen arrived at the burning plant they were unaware of the large amount of chlorine stored there, they said. They poured water on a tower of smoke and flames that one said was rising more than 100 feet.

Soon after water was sprayed on the fire the chlorine began to be smelled. Soon, the fumes were carried up with the smoke and spread over the residential area.

According to a fire department spokesman, the toxic fumes arose when water from the fire hoses came in contact with a highly concentrated chlorine cleaning compound.

Firemen switched to dry chemicals and foam to fight the blaze.

Meanwhile, fire officials decided the fumes posed a serious hazard to residents; and began to evacuate an area covering more than four square miles.

Employing helicopters equipped with public address systems and patrol cars the police and firemen urged residents to leave. Many persons carrying dogs and cats fled their homes and spent the night in school auditoriums or in their cars outside the endangered area.

Firemen controlled the flames early today, but did not let residents return to their homes until mid-morning. The smell of chlorine was still vaguely hanging in the air. The cause of the fire has not been determined.

Fuel Line Explodes

CULVER CITY, Calif., June 16 (UPI)—At least one person was killed and more than a dozen others injured today in an explosion and fire at a construction site on a busy intersection.

A block of buildings near the explosion caught fire as burning tar and debris were spewed high into the air.

At least 14 persons, including firemen, were taken to Brotman Memorial Hospital. Identities of the dead and injured were not immediately released.

A Los Angeles Fire Department spokesman said that the explosion was caused by a leak in a gas line underneath the ground near the construction site. The line reportedly was punctured by a tractor owned by the Griffith Company, which has a contract with the California Department of Transportation for a two-mile street widening project.

A spokeswoman for the Southern California Gas Company said that the severed line contained liquid fuel and was not a natural gas line.

Beame Aide Hints at Pay Help for City U.

under pressure to control the spending of one of its semi-autonomous agencies.

City budget officials say they must have a detailed and credible three-year spending plan from the university so that they can complete the city's own revised financial package for approval by the Emergency Financial Control Board.

The Deputy Mayor's statement followed assertions by the university chancellor, Dr. Robert J. Kibbee, that the city has the money to meet the university's final payroll of the current fiscal year but is balky at releasing it.

"Ways to Resolve It"

"The city doesn't have any sources of money to give them at this point in time," Mr. Zuccotti said, "but when we see his financial plan—and with other parties—there may be ways to resolve it."

"We won't discuss it until we see their plan," he added. By "other parties," Mr. Zuccotti was understood to mean the Carey administration, in a continuation of its role in the city's fiscal affairs.

The Governor's aides, meanwhile, sought to dash any hopes that the state would step in with more money for the City University.

The university was reopened last Monday, following a two-week shutdown in the middle of final examinations after an emergency advance by the state of $24 million from next year's budget. That $24 million was supposed to carry the university through the end of this fiscal year.

"It is clear that the state's participation was limited to that $24 million," a Carey aide said. The legislative measure provided an operating budget for the 1976-77 school year of $467 million (with an additional $3 million earmarked for Hostos Community College) after deducting the advance.

A Fiscally Timidous Saving

This sum is $48 million short of the $515 million Dr. Kibbee has said the university needs to maintain its present operations. The state has not been announcing, although the probable budget was known for weeks. University officials place the reductions already absorbed in the last year at $150 million—a cut unmatched, they say, by any city agency.

The May 28 shutdown thus capped a fiscally tumultuous spring during which the university, placed on a monthly cash allotment in March, twice had to draw on succeeding months' funds to pay its bills.

The specter of another disruptive spending crisis was raised by Dr. Kibbee Tuesday when he announced his intention to pay faculty members for the equivalent of the two weeks the system was closed down, counting on money he said had been promised by the city.

The $15 million that is in dispute includes $8 million for what Dr. Kibbee contends was a bookkeeping error involving money for collective bargaining; $3 million in excess fringe benefit money; and $4 million from the final installment on this year's Social Security payment that he says was to be transferred from nonoperating to operating funds.

A spokesman for District Council 37 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees union, meanwhile, said 6,000 nonprofessional City University workers received checks yesterday for two weeks—pay for one week prior to the shutdown and early pay for this week, totaling about $2.5 million. The early payment, she said, was arranged because the question of whether the nonprofessionals would be paid for the shutdown period was still in negotiation between Chancellor Kibbee and Victor Gotbaum, the union president.

The legislative plan for the university, which includes the changing of tuition at the State University rates of $750 and $900 a year, permits the city's contribution to City University's 10 community colleges to drop from $84 million in the current year to about $54 million in 1976-77, according to the lawmaker whose name the legislation carries.

The lawmaker, Assemblyman Irwin Landes, the Nassau County Democrat who is chairman of the Assembly's Higher Education Committee, said the revenue difference would be made up by tuition charged to students, similar to the way the State University's community colleges were financed.

The saved city money, he said, would then go not into the city treasury but to bolster next year's municipal contribution to the senior colleges—proposed as the city's last. The total operating budget for the community colleges for next year was put at $150 to $160 million, depending on tuition revenues.

The tuition schedule that was adopted by the Board of Higher Education this week provides a small break for full-time students who qualify for financial aid. For these students, unlike those at the State University, a $25 annual fee is incorporated as tuition, making it reimbursable.

But tuition for resident part-time students will be $35 a credit for freshmen and sophomores and $40 a credit for juniors and seniors, $10 higher than at the State University. For nonresident part-time students the rates will be considerably higher than in the state system: $55 a credit for all students compared with $25 for lower-division students and $30 for upper-division in the State University.

Dr. Kibbee said the nonresident rates had been made high to take into account the city's continuing contribution to the financing next year and could be reduced later.

In the current school year, a City University spokesman said, resident part-time students paid $30 a credit at senior colleges and $25 at community colleges. Nonresident part-time students paid $50 a credit from the freshman through the senior year, she said.

Beame Denies Pressure By U.S. on Labor P.

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

Mayor Beame said yesterday that, contrary to the assertions of Federal officials, he had received no word from them insisting that an agreement on new municipal labor contracts was a condition for the renewal of emergency Treasury loans next month.

"I didn't get that impression," Mr. Beame said of the indirect word he had received thus far from Treasury Secretary William E. Simon.

"They just want to know how it's going and where it's going," the Mayor said of the Federal Government's interest in the current negotiations with city unions.

However, Robert A. Gerard, Assistant Treasury Secretary, said the Federal concern was clear: "We're looking for solid agreements in principle with the major unions. Without that, we don't see how we can rely on the financial plan as the basis for renewing the loan."

Mr. Gerard is scheduled to visit the Emergency Financial Control Board this afternoon to check the progress of the controversial attempt to shape a new austerity plan for the city.

He said that one reason for his visit was to stress the need for the settlement of basic labor agreements within the wage-freeze policy before the date of the next loan, July 2. His second mission, Mr. Gerard said, will be to tell the Control Board to "decide who's right and who's wrong and out of the budget, and the various reports criticizing it, to give us a financial plan."

The Control Board has been working on the latter task, having been advised by its chairman, Governor Carey, and its executive director, Stephen Berger, that the Mayor's latest proposed revisions of the austerity plan do not go far enough. They say there is a need for more than $200 million in new and accelerated cuts above the Mayor's original proposal for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The differences between the Mayor and the Governor over the new cuts were the subject of a private meeting at City Hall last night of Mr. Berger, First Deputy Mayor John E. Zuccotti and Herbert Elish, executive director of the Municipal Assistance Corporation. While the Control Board is the state's main overseer of the Mayor's attempt to a $1 billion budget of M.A.C. also plays a role in the chief financing. Mayor Beame's remarks, delivered in Hall news conference, was not challenging authorities overseeing billion in annual Treasury loans to the Board's recent report on the labor negotiations would rely on the Board's recent report on improved working out was the only way to get cost-of-living creases.

Mr. Gerard, in a interview in Washington labor resolution of i not enough to satisfy eral Government's on there be no major un in the coming budget might jeopardize the Federal loans.

Drama Critic a $13 Smash Hit In Fashion Stakes at Belmont

By MICHAEL STRAUSS
Will Elmendorf's Drama Critic follow in the steps of Ruffian and Dearly Precious? The 2-year-old daughter of Reviewer scored her first career triumph in the $35,375 Fashion yesterday at Belmont Park Raceway in 1974. Race and Dearly Precious, last year, used the 5 1/2-furlong Fashion, which yesterday had its 78th running, as a stepping stone to 2-year-old filly championships. Judging by Drama Critic's performance, this filly may also be on the way to a crown. Sent to the post by the crowd of 17,500 as the $13-for-$2 fourth choice in the seven-horse field, Drama Critic handled her opposition with surprising ease. Well rated by Jean Cruguet, she beat Willard Freeman's Sly Grin to the wire by 2 1/2 lengths. Drama Critic gave Cruguet a joyride through most of the stretch run. Sent to the outside by the French jockey, the Elmendorf filly caught the favored and early pace-making Lucky Return a furlong from home and drew away. The choice finished fourth, trailing Calumet's third-place Our Mims by a neck. Drama Critic, conceded six pounds by Sly Grin, who carried 119 pounds, was timed in 1:05 4/5 for the 5 1/2-furlong trip. The clocking was not fast by past Fashion standards, but the winning filly didn't have to extend herself.

Warmth and Nearna as stakes winners. Special Warmth, shipped here from Nebraska, and ridden by Sam Maple, a brother of Eddie, came home seventh yesterday. Nearna, the recent winner of the Blue Hen at Delaware, was sixth.

Jockey Is Pleased
"I think this horse is going to be heard from," said Cruguet. "This distance today was too short for her. She wanted to run some more after we crossed the finish. I think, maybe, she was surprised when I pulled her up." Nevertheless, Cruguet used the whip on Drama Critic a few times entering the stretch as the filly was storming up to take the lead. Then he hit her again—lightly—at the eighth pole. "I felt she was anticipating a longest trip and would stop hurrying," said the jockey. "I didn't want her to loaf." The victory followed appearances in which the filly finished third and then second in maiden 5 1/2-furlong contests at Belmont. In both cases, she showed late foot. As a result of her success in the stakes, Drama Critic joined Sly Grin, Special any thoughts about Joe smoking "one more time." At the end, Frazier was on his feet, wanting to continue.

And yesterday, with Foreman at a poolside news conference at the island inn in Westbury, L.I., Frazier talked with relief of going to the life of no routine. Foreman, meanwhile, said he wanted Ali "as soon as possible," but that Young, who gave the out-of-condition champion trouble last April, would be a worthy opponent.

"There are those who thought he beat the champion of the world," Foreman said. "There are few boxing people, however, who believe Young would give Foreman much trouble. Yet a Foreman-Young bout probably wouldn't lose as much money as did the Foreman-Frazier rematch."

U.S. Open Starts Today With Weiskopf Choice

Special to The New York Times

DULUTH, Ga., June 16—It was the day before the opening of the 76th United States Open, and for a change there were no hassles, backbiting or overstated criticism of the golfcourse. It was a relaxed day in the hot Georgia sun as 150 players tuned up on the Highlands Course of the Atlanta Athletic Club, looking for the best placement of tee shots and studying the breaks of the greens.

The big fonsome attracted the most attention because it was the big guns at their easy-going best. Nicklaus shooting three straight birdies, one from a camp of weeds; Weiskopf snagging a birdie from the rough; Palmer saving par from a bunker and Irwin sinking a putt that broke at right angles.

Back in the air-conditioned locker room Johnny Miller, the 1973 champion, was saying he had shot a good round—though he would not reveal the score—that "put me in the picture again." Then he talked a while about pride, which he said was as important in competition as the good shots.

A World of Problems
"Take me in the 1973 open. Everybody remembers the 63 in the last round that won for me. But they don't remember what kept me in was the third round. I was six over par in five holes, and then I parred the rest of the way in. It added to 77, but at least it kept me in position to win the next day."

In the meeting with U.S.G.A. officials, Frank (Sandy) Tatum, chairman of the championship committee, said the association recognized it was overly-dependent on the Open and on television for its revenue. He also was aware of the excessive commercialism on the TV broadcasts.

Connors Victor; Nastase Defeats Smith

NOTTINGHAM, England, June 16 (AP)—Jimmy Connors moved confidently into the quarterfinals of the $100,000 Nottingham grass tennis tournament today as the only American survivor. The left-hander, sharpening up for next week's Wimbledon, defeated a fellow-American, Dick Stockton, 6-4, 6-2, in the third round.

Roger Taylor of Britain was the only American survivor. He took Ramirez to a Hebrakeur in the first set, won the second and made a strong fight in the third until he tired.

South Africa 6-0, 6-1 and entered the quarterfinals of the $90,000 Colgate grass tennis tournament, the last women's tunic for Wimbledon. Betsy Stove, the tall Dutchwoman, knocked out Sue Barker of Britain, the new French champion, 6-6, 6-3, 6-1. The 36-year-old Maria Bueno of Brazil battled 19-year-old Betsy Nagelsen of Florida for three sets, bowing by 5-7, 6-1, 7-5.

Little Rusa Casals cut down Lesley Hunt of Australia, 6-1, 6-3; Martina Navratilova, slimmer these days, won from Linda Mottram of Britain, 6-3, 6-1, and Olga Morozova, the Soviet star, defeated Pam Teeguarden, the American No. 11, 6-0, 2-6, 6-1. Mona Guerrant downed Ann Kiyomura, 6-4, 7-9, 6-2, in an all-American duel, and Virginia Wade of Britain beat Terry Holladay, a Californian, 6-1, 4-6, 6-1.

Ziegler Pulls Out
Larry Ziegler, winner of the New Orleans open earlier this season, suffered a pulled muscle in his shoulder and withdrew from the Open. Ziegler's spot in the 150-man field was taken by Mark Boyajian of Belleville, Ill., an amateur.

Reagan House, who played three seasons for the Montreal Canadiens before defecting to the World Hockey Association in 1973, returned to the Canadiens yesterday.

Playing for the Quebec Nordiques, the 26-year-old forward scored 51 goals in the 1975-76 season. Sam Pollock, general manager of the Canadiens, the National Hockey League champion, said, "I didn't expect it to happen so fast. He came to see us; we had one short meeting; and signed him. Basically he was coming back to his old team, where he had many friends. He said he felt more secure with Montreal."

Harry Neale, who coaches the New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association, has been named assistant coach of Team USA, this country's entry in September's Canada Cup hockey tournament. Bob Pulford, coach of the Los Angeles Kings in the National Hockey League, is Team USA's head coach and he selected Neale.

After five weeks of hospitalization, Walter Kennedy, former commissioner of the National Basketball Association, has been released. He underwent surgery for a malignant growth on the arm similar to the one suffered by Gene Littler, the golfer, who also recovered from the ailment.

Williwaw Captures Third Race in Row

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE
Special to The New York Times

NEWPORT, R.I., June 16—Williwaw, which has been the fastest yacht afloat on the ocean racing circuit this year, won again today in the Union Patch Trophy series, a prelude to the Bermuda Race that starts from here on Friday.

It was the third victory in a row for the new 41-foot Two Ton Class sloop owned by Seymour Sinek of Metuchen, N.J. Williwaw's first place, a sixth for Ted Turner's Tenacious and a seventh for Jon Kirk's Ratler kept the United States team well ahead in the international racing for the Union Patch Trophy.

This was the third event of four in the series, the fourth being the 635-mile passage to Bermuda. The 15 yachts from five nations will be scored on how well they do in the fleet of 162 starters to complete the series. The United States team now has 129 points to 110 for West Germany, which closed the gap somewhat today because of a second place for Duva and a fourth for Pinta.

Then comes Britain with 109 points, Canada 75 and Bermuda 66.

The course was a 25-mile one in Rhode Island Sound, and all hands knew they had been to sea. The fog was thick, with visibility seldom more than 50 yards, and the wind was blowing 20 to 25 knots from the southwest. Finding marks and looking out for other yachts commanded a lot of attention.

"It was hairy," said Turner, skipper of Tenacious, which was in the lead and had to find the marks for the others.

Williwaw, the squat, high-sided light-blue boat, posted the best corrected time again. This Peterson-designed yacht, which won the Southern Ocean Racing Circuit under the command of Lowell North, has Tim Stearns at the helm. Tim Stearns, as co-skipper and she will be watching in the Bermuda race.

The fog was so thick that the race committee from the Ida Lewis and New York Yacht Clubs canceled races for Divisions C and D in the concurrent Henry du Pont series. No one complained about these smaller vessels because there was plenty to do ashore to get ready for the long passage to Bermuda. The bigger boats in Class A and B did get in a race in the gusty conditions and a couple of boats blew out jibs and spinners. Sailmakers will keep sewing machines humming to repair the damage by Friday.

Jess Philips's Charisma, a two-year-old 53-foot sloop, posted the best time in Class 2, with John Kahlbretzer's Bumblebee 3 from Sydney, Australia, second, and David Cuckler's Hawkeye, a 48-foot Bruce King design, in third place.

Buzz Schofield's Ariete from Boston was a repeat winner in Class B, with the British yacht, Brother Cup, second and Walter Hanson's swift Recluta from Noroton, Conn., third.

The Yankees haven't won a pennant in 12 years. And Boston hasn't won a World Series since 1918. That's the balance we've got to preserve.

There was a lot of sweat, a lot of blood and a lot of sacrifice put into this ball club. Yet five ballplayers of mine had an agent by the name of Jerry Kapstein who kept me in the dark continuously.

Fleet, denying that the unloading of talent fore- shadowed the sale of his Oakland franchise, replied: "I will not be driven into bankruptcy by these astronomical, unjustified salaries ballplayers are demanding today. I have no intention of getting out of baseball. We still have a ball club and I'll attempt to rebuild it, and fast."

Rudi is one of the best players in this game. All of a sudden, we come into the clubhouse off the bus and he plays with us."

Al Davis, owner of the Oakland Raiders of the National Football League, also embroiled in legal disputes with players, said: "I'm really stunned. This will affect all sports very deeply. It's a mess."

One part of the "mess" that might have been averted yesterday was a possible strike by the players against baseball's All-Star game next month. The club owners announced that they would make their regular deposit of $390,000 into the pension fund on Aug. 1, despite the continuing stalemate on an overall contract.

From Richmond for the Iowa farm club.

So the Yankees, who couldn't get Findley's manager, Dick Williams, about 2 1/2 years ago, have settled for his pitching staff, reuniting the starters who were instrumental in Oakland's three consecutive baseball championships.

Manager Billy Martin immediately scheduled the pitchers, who started 13 of Oakland's 19 World Series games in 1972-73-74, to start against the White Sox in Chicago. It will be Hunter tomorrow, Blue Friday and Holtzman Saturday.

However, there was some question as to whether Blue would be able to pitch Friday, because of Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's order that, pending the outcome of his hearing into Findley's sales, the players would remain on Oakland's inactive list.

You can't fight a boilover after it happens. Put in PRESTONE II Coolant now.

A summer boilover can do more than ruin a car trip. It can ruin your engine. Which means a boilover can be just as deadly as a winter freeze-up.

So if you think your coolant needs changing, don't wait for fall. Flush out your cooling system now. This weekend. And put in a fresh fill of PRESTONE II Coolant.

Because PRESTONE II, with its patented silico-silicate formula, will help prevent boilovers and corrosion all summer long. (And it'll help prevent freeze-ups all winter, too.)

To make it even easier for you, we've outlined two simple steps for proper cooling system maintenance.

Follow them. It's a once-a-year job that takes twenty minutes—and it could save the life of your engine.

Step 1. Flushing.
Start with PRESTONE 10-Minute Radiator Flush. Just pour it in, run your engine for 10 minutes and drain... you'll flush any rusty and worn out coolant from your radiator.

Step 2.
Put in 50% PRESTONE II Coolant. Check your owner's manual for your car's cooling system capacity and pour in enough PRESTONE II (2 gallons for most cars) for a 50-50 mix with water.

That solution, with a 15 lb. radiator pressure cap, will raise the boiling point of your coolant to 265°F.

Phils Top Giants Behind Kaat, 6-1

By AL HARVIN

It was the 15th defeat in 19 games for Montreal.

Cubs 5, Reds 3

AT CINCINNATI—The Cubs jumped on Pat Zachry for five hits and five runs in a first inning highlighted by a two-run Manny Trillo single and a two-run Steve Swisher double. The game was interrupted three times by rain and finally called in the seventh inning. It was only the second time in three years that Chicago has beaten Cincinnati, and Bill Bonham (6-3), who had the only Cubs' victory over the Reds last season, got credit for this triumph. He gave up seven hits, including Joe Morgan's 12th home run of the season. The Reds had defeated the Cubs in 17 of their last 18 meetings.

and allowed the Giants only four hits as he won his fourth straight game and lifted his won-lost record to 6-2.

Dick Allen provided Kaat with all the offense he needed as he ended an 0-15 slump with a three-inning single and an eighth-inning home run that produced four runs.

It was the 241st victory against 139 defeats for Kaat, the top winning active pitcher in baseball. He led the American League in hit batsmen in 1961 and 1962 with 11 and 18, respectively, and tied for the league lead in wild pitches with 10 in 1961 and led the American League in that department with 13 in 1962.

Lately he has drawn some protests for the fast manner he sets up and delivers the ball, some of the batters complaining that he pitches before they're ready.

Kaat lost his shutout in the eighth when Ken Reitz doubled and scored on Marc Hill's sacrifice fly.

Allen's two-run single in the third came off Montefusco (7-6) and his two-run home run came off Gary Lavelle.

Mark Fidrych, a rookie right-hander, went the distance for Detroit, his sixth complete game, and improved his record to 5-1. Kansas City had won its last seven straight.

Aschner, 22, defeated Leslie Allen, 23, 6-3, 6-2. Aschner defeated Ann Fritz, 6-3, 6-2; Marie Buehler, 6-2, 6-3; and Lynn Stone, 6-3, 6-2. Aschner defeated Linda Stapleton, 2-6, 6-4.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn., June 16 (UPI)—A 21-year-old Minnesota man has been arrested in the bottle-throwing incident in which a National Football League official was injured during the Minnesota Vikings-Dallas Cowboys playoff game last Dec. 28.

The Bloomington police said today the 21-year-old man was arrested last Thursday and had been released to the custody of his attorney, Police Lt. Howard Wright refused to identify the man, say what he was charged with or give the name of his attorney. He would not say why news of the arrest was withheld almost a week.

Investigators said the arrest was made after new information was received about one of 15 original suspects. The police said the man in question had been eliminated as a suspect because of lack of evidence.

TRADING VIGOROUS IN CORN FUTURES

July Is Down as December Rises—Soybeans Drop

By ELIZABETH M. FOWLER

Corn futures attracted some vigorous trading yesterday, and at the close the July contract was down 1 cent to $2.95 a bushel. But new-crop December corn was up 2 cents a bushel to $2.81.

The discrepancy can be explained by the activity of "spreaders" such as commercial traders, exporters and some speculators who buy one month and sell another.

Some weeks ago they rushed to buy July futures, sending the price up sharply because of large export demand, including Soviet purchases. At the same time they sold December corn because the old crop is expected to be harvested in the fall.

Yesterday these same traders were evening out their positions by selling July and buying back December on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Yankees Score Early In Contest With Twins

BLOOMINGTON, Minn., June 16—The Yankee clubhouse sounded like a 25th anniversary high school reunion tonight when three of the team's new players arrived before the game with Minnesota.

The Yanks were batting in the seventh and leading 6-4. As soon as Elrod Hendricks, Grand Jackson and Doyle Alexander walked into the clubhouse, the seniors—though not by much—Yankees greeted them and much chatter and laughter. When Vida Blue and Ken Holtzman join the Yankees, the team will have 12 players who weren't Yankees at the end of last season.

Figueras Is Starter

None of the three newcomers were in the starting lineup, but Ed Figueroa was the starter. Figueras was the starter in the game, and he led off the inning with a home run. He pitched 5 1/3 innings and gave up three runs and one homer.

Imports of Crude Oil Rise to a Record

Crude oil imports into the United States rose to a record high last week, according to statistics issued yesterday by the American Petroleum Institute.

A record of 6.23 million barrels of foreign crude oil a day came into the United States in the week ended June 11, compared with 5.36 million barrels a day in the week to June 4 and 3.25 million barrels a day in the week ended June 13, 1975.

The previous record for crude imports was 5.76 million barrels a day in the week ended last March 12.

Product imports, however, diminished last week to 1.17 million barrels a day from 1.47 million barrels a day in the preceding week. In the comparable week a year ago the nation imported 1.76 million barrels a day.

Supplies and production of major petroleum items continued to appear adequate to meet seasonal needs.

Gasoline production rose to a record of 7.24 million barrels a day from 7.23 million barrels a day a week earlier, and 6.42 million barrels a day a year ago.

the week before, and 83.2 percent last year.

Some Price Controls Ended WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP)—The Federal Energy Administration proposed today to end price control on home heating oil and diesel fuel, effective July 31.

An F.E.A. statement said the move, which would take effect unless Congress objects within 15 days, would not increase consumer fuel prices and might

Although Congress directed the F.E.A. to remove petroleum price controls gradually by late 1979, it allowed the agency to speed, decontrol, subject to Congressional disapproval.

On June 3, the F.E.A. ended price controls on residual oil, a heavy fuel oil burned primarily in industries, ships and some large multiple residences.

The residual oil price already was at the same level as uncontrolled world prices and the decontrol had little or no impact.

In its new move, the F.E.A. proposed to remove price controls from "middle distillate" oils, which include home heating oil, diesel fuel and kerosene.

The F.E.A. Administrator, Frank G. Zarb, was traveling abroad when the announcement was made, but the agency said Mr. Zarb expected no price in-

By A. E. RASKIN

GENEVA, June 16—The International Labor Organization bogged down tonight in its efforts to arrive at a consensus on how to deal with multinational corporations.

The I.L.O.'s World Employment Conference is scheduled to close tomorrow, but so deep were the cleavages on issues that the preliminary draft of a report summarizing the supposed agreements reached by subcommittees in two weeks of debate have to be sent back to an expanded drafting committee.

The so-called Group of 77, which now claims 113 members, among third-world countries, blamed the multinationals for worldwide economic imbalance, for encroaching on the sovereignty of the nations in which they operate and for often monopolistically fixing prices and dominating markets.

The Group's program called for many mandatory restraints aimed at making foreign companies mold their activities and investments to the needs of host countries rather than to the quest for profits.

Favorable Climate Urged

The industrialized countries contended that multinationals could strengthen the economies of developing countries, especially through their effectiveness in creating jobs.

The drafters will work all through the night in the hope of having something to report to the next six to 10 days. This would presumably be done both by replacing many of the oldest, noisiest current jets and modifying the engines of some of the less raucous smaller airliners.

Final details of the repeatedly delayed antinoise bill are being thrashed out by representatives of various interested Government agencies.

The official John L. McLucas, also said prospects were good that Congress would enact projected legislation for sharply reducing aircraft noise over the next six to 10 years.

Financing in Question

The most sensitive element of the plan is how much financial help the airlines would receive in purchasing new aircraft to replace their aging fleets of noisy first-generation subsonic jets—chiefly Boeing 707's and McDonnell Douglas DC-8's.

Dr. McLucas indicated that the airline industry would probably have to settle for loan guarantees instead of outright subsidy, as the carriers originally proposed. In either case, the Government funds would be parceled out from a so-called "escrow fund" fed primarily by a new 2 percent surcharge on airline ticket purchases.

The new tax would be offset by a reduction of at least 2 percent on the current tax that goes for airport and airways construction.

The F.A.A. chief offered his views on the aviation industry, which he called an "endangered species," in a luncheon speech to the Iron Gate Chapter of the Air Force Association and in a subsequent interview. The

Payments Balance Swings Into Deficit

Decline in Quarter Follows a Surplus for All of 1975

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 16—The United States balance of payments on current account swung, as expected, into modest deficit in the first quarter of this year after a strong surplus all through 1975, the Commerce Department reported today.

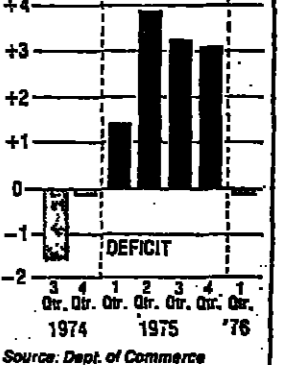

According to the recently announced new format for balance-of-payments statistics, no overall deficit or surplus in the balance of payments was published on the ground that these figures are no longer meaningful, particularly in a world of floating currency-exchange rates.

The current account covers all transactions except inflows and outflows of capital. Its dominant item is export and import trade in merchandise, and it was a swing into deficit in the trade account that fully accounted for the change in the current-account balance in the first quarter.

The trade balance reflected a surge in United States imports in line with the strong recovery in the domestic economy. Treasury officials have welcomed the trade and current-account deficits, at least for this year, as a help to the rest of the world with no harm

Dr. McLucas, who was Air Force Secretary before President Ford switched him to the F.A.A. post last winter, echoed the view of many aviation leaders that the industry was threatened by low profits, lack of capital for new equipment, and absence of a national aviation policy.

"There is growing awareness," he said, "that our industry has become an 'endangered species' that we have to do something about."

He quoted estimates that 1,000 new aircraft costing about $20-billion would be needed over the next 10 years, adding: "The financial climate within which our airline industry now operates prohibits new acquisitions for all but the most pres-

List Retreats Following the Death of U.S. Envoy—Volume at 21.62 Million

By DOUGLAS W. CRAIG

The stock market shook off Tuesday's spell of profit taking yesterday to post a modest gain in moderately active trading.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average, up 6.17 points to 2642.43 at 3 P.M. yesterday, retreated thereafter following the report of the death of the American Ambassador to Lebanon to close at 2638.62, up 2.70.

The list was helped during the morning by the Commerce Department report that personal income rose 0.8 percent last month. This was viewed as another in a recent series of generally favorable economic indicators and one that might allay some concerns over a possible fall off in consumer buying.

Robert Munchin, a partner at Goldman Sachs in charge of market trading, said that the market had "recently been characterized by substantially better volume on the upside." He also noted that participation in the market's recent upturn has broadened, with some lagging groups, such as pharmaceuticals, beginning to move ahead.

Volume Climbs

Advances led declines by an 8-to-5 ratio as volume climbed to 21.62 million shares from 18.44 million Tuesday.

Nationally, trading in all issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange was 25.53 million shares, compared with 22.40 million shares traded on Tuesday.

Prices were lower at the close, but turned up within the first hour and stayed ahead throughout the session. Oil issues were again active and turned mixed a day after the Senate judiciary committee's vote to report out a bill calling for the breakup of the 18 largest oil concerns.

Bank for Savings Announces Merger

By HERBERT KOSHEVITZ

The New York Bank for Savings announced yesterday that it would merge with the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Syracuse.

The merger with the Syracuse savings and loan association is the second undertaken by the New York Bank for Savings.

In May, it announced that it was negotiating to merge with the Genesee Federal Savings and Loan Association of Rochester.

According to William P. Schweikert, executive vice president of the New York Bank for Savings, both of the upstate banks have received approval for the mergers from their depositors who are the virtual shareholders of the banks. Approval is also necessary from the Federal Home Loan Board in Washington, and the New York State Banking Board. Continued on Page 47, Column 2

Huge Share Offer By A.T. & T. Sold Out

By STEVE RATNER

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company yesterday successfully sold 12 million shares of its common stock, valued at $583 million, in the largest direct common stock offering in American history.

"From what we can see the issue appears to be oversubscribed and done," said a spokesman for Morgan Stanley & Company, which coordinated a network of more than 300 brokerage firms involved in the sale. "There was very, very strong demand all day long."

The stock was sold at 54 3/4, which was also A.T. & T.'s closing price for the day.

Large stock offerings are not unknown to the nation's second largest company. The Interior spokesman said

The Washington Star

WASHINGTON, June 16—The first lease-sales to United States oil companies of rights to drill for oil and gas off the Atlantic coastline have been scheduled for Aug. 17 in New York City, Interior Secretary Thomas S. Kleppe said today.

The lease-sales will involve about 379,750 acres of seabottom off the coast area between Rehoboth Beach, Del., and Tom's River, N.J., which is about 80 miles north of Atlantic City. The closest areas to shore will be around 47 miles and will stretch outwards to about 92 miles.

On another controversial issue, Mr. Kleppe raised the possibility that Alaska "oil might have to be sold to Japan in late 1977."

Mr. Kleppe, in a background briefing today with reporters, said, "It looked like the bids for the leases would be interesting and on the upside," he said. "The start of drilling would be the first in the Atlantic, which is a 'new frontier' area for energy resources."

Mr. Kleppe also reported that two other areas in the Atlantic—George's Bank off New England and the Southeast Georgia embayment, which have also been scheduled for lease-sales this year, have been postponed until some time in 1977.

He attributed the postponement to the necessary environmental and scientific studies still remaining to be done. These areas were also scheduled to be leased sometime this year.

The Interior spokesman said

well as some private American investment in Spain.

Simultaneously, a group of 30 West German industrialists are in Madrid studying investment possibilities. To both the West Germans and the Americans, both already heavy investors, Spain is offering financial advantages and a friendly political climate with the promise that both will be maintained under the new regime that is now in the making.

The calls for outside help are being provoked by an economic situation in which inflation, unemployment and slow growth are threatening to undermine both the political transformation and the social peace that Juan Carlos pledged in his address to Congress.

Despite some signs of recovery from last year, the worst in 20 years in terms of economic growth, according to Mr. Villar Mir, pessimism is still strong here. The minister has predicted an increase in the gross national product of 3 to 4 percent this year compared with the stagnation last year.

The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development in Paris has estimated only 2.5 percent growth for Spain this year. Even if the minister's more optimistic forecast is borne out, it still means more unemployment, according to some economists.

José Ramon Lasuen, one of the country's most prominent economists, declared recently that an expansion of 6 to 7 percent was needed to stop further growth in unemployment.

Accurate unemployment figures are difficult to obtain. The latest estimate, published yesterday in Informations, an afternoon daily, put it at one million, or between 7 and 8 percent of the work force. Spain's economy has failed to take up the slack caused by reduced work opportunities in the rest of Europe for Spanish workers.

Accompanying the unemployment figures is the fact that SEAT automobile factory in Barcelona, Spain is seeking to increase exports and attract more foreign investment.

2 Biggest U.S. Banks Shun Soviet Loan

The Washington Star

WASHINGTON, June 16—The two largest United States commercial banks decided not to participate in a $250 million Eurodollar borrowing by the Soviet Union.

Mr. Kleppe said, any sales would be in the nature of "exchanges," meaning the oil would go to Japan in exchange for Indonesian oil.

The reason for the possible overseas sale is basically that the Alaskan pipeline, which is carrying oil from the North Slope in the Arctic to southern Alaska for planned shipment by tanker to the West Coast is going to the wrong place.

Any sale of Alaskan oil overseas would require Congressional approval. The law enabling the building of the controversial Alaskan pipeline specifically prohibited exports of the oil that is supposed to help the United States solve its energy crisis.

The Bank of America and Citibank have decided not to participate, spokesmen confirmed.

The Broker in a Hostile Tender Offer

By ROBERT METZ

When a brokerage firm acts as a dealer-manager of a hostile tender offer, a conflict of interest inevitably results.

As sponsor of the tender offer, the firm is naturally partisan. The customer nevertheless needs an independent opinion.

Under the plan, which is in registration, Sharon would offer $27 principal amount of a new 3 percent subordinated debenture due 2001 for each Foremost share.

The offer is opposed by Foremost, a food, drug and liquor wholesaler, which has asked a San Francisco court to restrain Sharon's efforts to gain control.

Six Dean Witter customer's men were reached Tuesday by this reporter, who identified himself by name, but not by affiliation, and was apparently not recognized.

Mr. Nixon eventually ended general price control, but kept controls on oil because of the sudden shortage imposed by the Arab embargo of 1973-1974.

All were polite and generally knowledgeable, though some said they knew relatively little about the two companies.

One representative, when asked if a Foremost shareholder should make the exchange, said:

"Frankly, I think you are better off with Foremost stock. That group that runs Sharon has a reputation as a raider. I wouldn't want to be in a company they control."

Another, who said he was unimpressed with the individual running Sharon, said that he had contacted the exchange at $17.50 to $21.40.

Mr. Posner was reached in his offices in Florida. Informed of the Dean Witter representatives' lack of enthusiasm for the exchange, he said, "I can't understand that they could take that attitude."

Thomas J. Murtagh, senior vice president of Dean Witter, said: "We are in registration and it is inappropriate to comment on the offer at this time."

Annual dues are $2,740 plus sales tax. This includes lockers for the husband and wife and charges for the intracub golf tournaments held during the year. is one of the highest inflation in Western Europe. Mr. Villar Mir has hoped to keep the rate in 1976 to the 1975 level of 10 percent. But the rise in food prices has been particularly heavy. Government intervention is expected to moderate private investment, directing savings into exports and carrying a moderate inflationary policy in the interim.

exports and thus stimulate industrial activity and reduce the record payments deficits the country is now running.

There are also hopes for foreign investment, particularly in the improved prospects for the integration of Spain into the Common Market.

But achieving what officials are calling a "social pact" is expected to be more difficult. The Government record on inflation has not convinced wage earners that it has found an answer and consequently wage demands are expected to continue to be aggressive.

In addition, reform of the state-controlled organization to a free and representative labor movement is still only a promise.

Spanish Finance Minister Juan Miguel Villar Mir said today. The credit line will be for five years at a 6 percent annual interest rate.

Mr. Villar Mir has been in Washington for the last two days for meetings with L.M.F. officials. Treasury Secretary William E. Simon and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. He paid a brief courtesy call on President Ford this morning, the White House said.

The Finance Minister will travel to New York City tomorrow for meetings with officials of several large banks to discuss possible private loans for Spain, informed sources said.

The Citibank spokesman added: "Our decision not to participate in this particular syndication does not in any way reflect on the Soviet Union's credit standing."

A spokesman for the Bank of America, reached in San Francisco, confirmed that the bank had decided not to participate in this borrowing. The bank gave no reason for its decision.

Fed Barred a Rate Cut On 22 Occasions in '75

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 16 — On 22 occasions last year the Federal Reserve Board voted to disapprove requests by one or more of the 12 regional Reserve Banks to reduce the discount rate, it was disclosed today in the board's annual report.

On nearly all occasions the vote of the board was unanimous among those present and voting.

Most of the negative votes occurred early in the year when directors of the various Reserve Banks wanted to reduce the discount rate more rapidly than the board was prepared to approve.

Again late in the year several Reserve Banks requests for a drop in the prevailing 6 percent discount rate were rejected, though the rate was cut to 5½ percent early in 1976.

perous airlines. Indeed, most carriers can now afford only to lease badly needed planes."

In Dr. McLucas's view, the next generation of airliners would have to be financed by "some combination of government and private initiative."

To tackle the problem, Dr. McLucas called for better cooperation between industry and Government agencies, perhaps through the naming of a single coordinator at a top level in Washington. He said he thought it was a good idea in view of the staggering cost of new aviation projects, to explore the idea of joint development with European partners. And it was at this point that he brought up the matter of a second-generation SST.

Noting the apparently expressed interest of foreign leaders in joint projects, Dr. McLucas said: "A joint effort to advance the prospects and the design of the next-generation SST would be in keeping with this new spirit of international cooperation. Frankly, I believe that a properly paced, well-thought-out program would receive favorable consideration by both the private and public sectors in this country."

The F.A.A. chief said that recent Government research promised a great reduction in the noise of SST engines and indicated fuel consumption could approach that of narrow-body conventional jets. He estimated that an economically viable new SST could be flying in the late 1980's or early 1990's.

New York SST Trial Urged

PARIS, June 16 (UPI)—William T. Coleman Jr., United States Transportation Secretary, expressed guarded optimism today that the supersonic aircraft was here to stay, and again urged New York to permit trial flights of the British-French Concorde.

"If New York expects to re-maintain the primary port of exit and entry into the United States," Mr. Coleman said in a news conference, "it doesn't serve their interests to deny landing rights to a foreign aircraft which in my judgment is entitled to demonstrate it can meet our noise standards and otherwise comply with our regulations."

The Johns-Manville Corporation announced yesterday price increases of 5 percent on its full line of polyvinyl chloride plastic pipe products, effective July 1. It follows an increase of about 7 percent effected June 1 on selected plastic pipe products. Recent resin price increases necessitated the higher price move by Johns-Manville, the announcement explained.

Texaco Inc. announced yesterday a price increase of 1 cent a gallon on all grades of motor gasoline to all classes of trade. The price change is effective throughout Texaco's market area.

Oil Nations Linked to Pound's Decline

Under pressure from the subcommittee, the Federal Reserve reported in March that more than 5 percent of the deposits of the six largest United States banks, or about $11 billion, are from the Middle East and North African oil-producing countries...

Even so, the bank reported, the oil exporters found a few places to build up their overseas investments. In the first quarter of this year, they put $4.3 billion into a category that the bank identified only as "other countries."

That amount represented an increase from $4.1 billion in the last quarter of 1975 and from $3.1 billion in the previous period.

Two obvious, though unnamed, members of the "other countries" group are West Germany and Switzerland. Because both countries' economies are strong, their currencies are as well, thanks in part to OPEC demand.

Oil-country disinvestment with sterling was also apparent in the bank's data on the pounds that nations' central banks hold in their reserves, along with gold and dollars.

From March 1975 to March of this year, world reserves of sterling have dropped from $8.6 billion to 7.1 billion. By far the largest holders are the oil countries, and the drop in their holdings has been even sharper...

By last year, they had become disenchanted with such holdings, but they nevertheless... added $4.3 billion more. In the first three months of this year, however, they actually reduced their holdings, by $400 million.

Part of the reason is that the oil countries are using much more of their revenues from exports to invest in their own countries, in building up schools, housing, roads, factories, and defenses, to the point now where at least one, Iran, has had to borrow money abroad.

The Bank of England again was active in squeezing forward positions and making sterling more expensive in the short term, but dealers said the bank did not feel it necessary to buy pounds as the currency stayed above the apparent support line of $1.77.

The dollar maintained its recent downward trend on Continental markets, registering marginal losses on all markets except Zurich, where it fell sharply against the Swiss franc.

In Zurich the dollar closed at 2.4653 francs, down from 2.4767 yesterday. In Frankfurt it was down from 2.5720 marks to 2.5715, in Paris from 4.7300 francs to 4.7290, in Brussels from 40.145 francs to 40.045, in Amsterdam from 2.7350 guilders to 2.7290, and in Milan from 852.60 lire to 852.50.

The price of gold closed 9 cents lower in Zurich at $125.2 and 75 cents lower at $125.12 in London.

The pound hit a three-week high of $1.7850 in early trading but dealers said the massive Trade Union Congress vote was not enough in itself to consolidate sterling's gains and it fell in some light selling and profit taking. The pound closed a $1.7754, slightly lower than yesterday's $1.7775.

Effies Focus on the Bottom Line

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY You've got to admit that Aunt Bluebell ranks right up there with George Whipple, leader of the anti-squeeze squad, as far as being an irritating television commercial character.

G.E. Ads to Sponsor Belshof Romeo Telecast

During the two-hour telecast of the Belshof Ballet's "Romeo and Juliet" on the CBS-TV Network June 27 the General Electric Company will air some commercial special of its own.

Unlike most awards in this industry, which are bestowed for creative excellence, Effies are voted for effective advertising. That means that companies interested in enhancing the competition must supply marketing strategies and proof of achieved goals, a requirement that would remove the more secretive marketers from the running.

Not just a single commercial or ad was shown for each winner of an Effie or honorable mention, but a selection of pieces from each campaign. In addition the Effie-winning agency or client gave some insights into the marketing program that made the campaign a winner.

Survive and make a contribution when you fully appreciate the real world in which you must exist.

One of the B.B.D.O. Effie winners was the campaign for Campbell's Chunky Soup, which helped to introduce three new varieties of the product and also reverse a downturn in the prepared soup market brought on by economy minded housewives making their own.

The agency's other wins were with the Flair Hardhead pen, from the Paper Mate Division of Gillette (an animated spot); Scott Paper's Waldorf Bedroom Tissue, and the Black & Decker Workmate workbench.

Associates, for the Philadelphia Merchants Association's anti-shoplifting campaign that is now licensed in 11 states and four foreign countries.

The Coca-Cola Bottling Company of New York last year brought out its own line of drink mixers—ginger ale, tonic water and club soda. With its agency, Jack Cantwell Inc., it went about giving it a British image in order to better compete with other quality premium brands—Schweppes and Canada Dry.

The bottling company, which not only has the Coca-Cola but also the Dr. Pepper franchise, as well as other interests, is proceeding slowly with Rumbles. Up to now its effort has been to introduce it into good bars and restaurants, private clubs and mom-and-pop type grocery stores.

The boards of directors of Downe Communications and the Bartell Media Corporation have approved a deal that will make Bartell a wholly owned subsidiary of Downe, which now owns 66 percent of Bartell. The Charter Company owns 43 percent of Downe.

Did you know that the Hanes Corporation, which did so well selling L'EGGS pantyhose in supermarkets, is now testing the selling meat's underwear in the same milieu. The brand is U.S. Mele. Its ad agency is Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample and the lucky test cities are Savannah, Ga., Green Bay, Wis., Tucson, Ariz., and Boise, Idaho.

Use of Non-Bell Items On Telephones Wins

A Federal Appeals Court in Richmond, yesterday partly removed a stay that blocked connection of non-Bell communications gear with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company lines.

The ruling by the Fourth Circuit of Appeals allows Bell System customers to begin using data and ancillary equipment on A. T. & T. lines without using special equipment provided by Bell System companies at extra charge. The stay issued by the Court in April remains in effect, however, for telephones and switchboards.

Officials of the Federal Communications Commission said ancillary equipment now to be allowed to be used on A. T. & T. lines without special couplers provided by the Bell System because of the Court's ruling includes automatic answering machines, automatic dialers, conference call devices, photocopiers and computer terminals.

A.T.&T. obtained the original court order to block implementation of new F.C.C. regulations allowing the connection of telephones and other equipment.

The F.C.C. and A. T. & T's 24 Bell System units and about 1,640 non-Bell companies have been wrangling over direct connection of customer equipment for more than eight years. A. T. & T. contends that a company-provided coupler is needed to protect the phone network.

However, the companies that manufacture and sell equipment for customers to hook up themselves say that there isn't any danger of harm and the coupler is an unnecessary device to prevent competition.

Commenting on the Federal Appeals Court ruling, Thomas S. Nurnberger, executive vice president of A. T. & T. said, "We are gratified that a unanimous court has, for the most part, upheld the stay and will continue to evaluate the matter of registration and its impact on the consumer." He added, "We would have preferred a total stay until the whole issue could be properly studied."

Kevin Hannon, executive director of the North American Telephone Association, a trade association, said the group "is concerned and confused regarding the decision," in view of the telephone company's historic position of opposing the F.C.C. action to protect the telephone network. Mr. Hannon said ancillary and data devices posed a much greater probability for harm and abuse to the network than voice devices such as the association's members offer to its customers.

Dividend Decision By I.B.M. July 27

The International Business Machines Corporation announced it would consider dividend action on July 27 instead of in late June as in the past. There have been recurring rumors that I.B.M. might increase its dividend at that time.

The company said that consideration of the dividend in July would put the action in conformity with the other three quarters when dividends are declared after quarterly earnings have been released, instead of before.

I.B.M.'s latest dividend payment was $1.75 on June 10 and prior to that it paid $1.75 a share on March 10. Last year the company paid $1.50 in March and June and $1.75 in September and December.

CNA Financial Settles Suits

The CNA Financial Corporation said an agreement had been made by all parties to settle nine consolidation class and derivative action suits that had been pending against the company. The company said it did not expect the settlement would have a material effect. The lawsuits had sought relief on behalf of CNA and persons who acquired or sold CNA securities between 1969 and 1974 alleging corporate and securities law liabilities.

Under the agreement, CNA said it would assign the benefits from all derivative claims alleged in the litigation as its participation in the settlement of the various actions. In addition, CNA said it would pay its legal fees and expenses and those of present and former officers, directors and employees who are defendants and indemnification of those and other defendants. All defendants in the suits have denied any wrongdoing and liability.

In addition, the company said more than 30 defendants would contribute an aggregate of $9.5 million and surrender claims against each other. To facilitate the settlement, the Loews Corporation, which owns 57 percent of CNA, is waiving any claims it might have as a shareholder. The settlement is subject to court approval after a hearing set for early August.

Payment Delayed By Universal Gas

The Universal Gas and Oil Company, a Bermuda-based subsidiary of the Maritime Fruit Carriers Company, announced a $440,000 interest payment that was due Tuesday on its $11 million of 8 percent convertible debentures due 1987.

However, a Maritime Fruit spokesman said there was a 30-day grace period on the debentures of the subsidiary, which has steamship company assets but is not engaged in oil or gas production.

Maritime Fruit, a steamship company with headquarters in Haifa, Israel, has been in default on part of its debt since February, when new management was installed in an effort to untangle its affairs.

Maritime Fruit has a $12 million, 6 1/2 percent convertible debenture issue outstanding, due 1989. A spokesman for the company said the next interest payment on it was due Sept. 15.

General Dynamics And Fokker in Deal

AMSTERDAM, June 16 (Reuters)—The Fokker Aircraft Company said today it had signed interim agreements with the General Dynamics Corporation to assemble the Netherlands F-16 fighter planes ordered by the Dutch and Norwegian armed forces.

A spokesman for the Dutch-German company said it hoped to complete the contracts within the next few weeks after approval from the Dutch Government.

The Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark and Norway last year agreed to a $2.1 billion purchase of 350 F-16s in exchange for a share in the production of the single-engine jet.

In Washington, Government sources said negotiations between General Dynamics and European subcontractors had been stalled until the agreement with Fokker.

Esmark to Invest

Donald P. Kelly, president of Esmark, said the company planned to invest another $20 million in Britain over the next four years, mainly in its Swift & Company meat business. He said Esmark had already invested $20 million in Britain. Annual sales of Swift and another Esmark subsidiary, Playtex, in Britain total about $118 million.

Mr. Kelly said that Esmark was looking "very actively" at British companies with a view to making suitable acquisitions.

Carey Signs a School Tax Measure That Legislators Say May Be Illegal

ALBANY, June 16—Governor Carey signed into law today a measure allowing local school districts to raise their property tax rates beyond their legal ceiling—a measure that New York State legislators generally agreed as they passed it last week was of doubtful legality.

The bill was one of 14 signed by the Governor today, halfway through the Legislature's week-long recess. He also vetoed five bills, including one that would have dropped the state's $300 million charge for pilots who make an emergency landing and take off at the Gov. Thomas E. Dewey Thruway.

The school-tax measure is designed—somehow, imperfectly, its sponsors agree—to overcome the objections of a 1974 Court of Appeals ruling that a state law allowing school districts to exceed their tax ceiling to pay for teacher retirements and Social Security benefits was unconstitutional.

The court ruled that a constitutional amendment was required to allow the school districts to do this.

With a June 15 deadline facing it, the Legislature was caught between a proposal by Governor Carey to enact a statewide property tax that school districts could use at their discretion to raise money, and a proposal from the Senate majority leader, Warren M. Anderson, Republican of Binghamton, to defy the court, in effect, and simply extend the current law.

In the end, the Legislature did both, by extending the current law and broadening that state property tax provision so that it would automatically apply to local school districts.

Other actions taken by the Governor today included the following:

PRIVATE CLAIMS
He vetoed a bill sponsored by Senator Richard E. Schenck, Republican-Conservative of Cornwall-on-Hudson, allowing several of the State's constituents and companies in his district to file a late claim against the state for the value of land condemned for an airport.

Such private claims bills were once common in the Legislature, giving special consideration to the rights of such claimants after the deadline to sue expired. The Governor argued in his veto message that such bills were "fundamentally inconsistent with the notion of equal treatment under the law," and pointed out that legislation, which he sponsored, passed last week giving the Court of Claims discretion to hear such claims if it so chose.

Last year, Mr. Carey vetoed all 18 similar "private claims" bills.

VOTER REGISTRATION
He signed a bill making voters who transfer their registration from one county to another within 30 days of a primary eligible to vote in the primary.

AUTO INSURANCE
He signed a measure extending until August 1977 the law prohibiting cancellation of auto insurance except for nonpayment of the premium or revocation of the driver's license or registration. The law was originally enacted to prevent insurance companies from dumping their high-risk clients with the advent of the state's three-year-old no-fault insurance program.

BROADCAST HEARINGS
The Governor approved a bill permitting radio and television broadcasts of Public Service Commission hearings, which hitherto had been closed to broadcasters. Mr. Carey said the law would help ease the commission's rate-setting hearings, which are often held during business hours and thus are beyond the reach of working people.

LOCAL DOCTOR
He vetoed a measure that would have allowed the Jones Memorial Hospital in the village of Wellsville, in the state's western region, to recruit a local physician by guaranteeing him a minimum gross salary.

The Governor pointed out in his veto that under state and federal law, the guarantee between the doctor's income from patients' charges and the minimum salary would have to be made up by state and Federal Medicaid funds.

RENT RISE DATA
Mr. Carey signed a law requiring the supervising agency managing a state-aided Mitchell-Lama housing project to make available to tenants all pertinent information relating to a proposed increase in rents.

PIPE BLAST KILLS 3 IN LOS ANGELES
LOS ANGELES, June 16 (AP)—Workers widening a busy Los Angeles street touched off an explosion in an underground gas pipeline today that engulfed a street and killed three men and injured 26.

One witness reported seeing female employees of a drapery company running screaming in black smoke, some with their clothes and hair on fire.

A row of businesses along the north side of an entire block of Venice Boulevard was destroyed, with damage estimated by fire officials at more than $1 million.

Hours after the flames had been extinguished, fire investigators searched the rubble for additional bodies.

The explosion occurred when street construction crews pierced a Standard Oil Company gas pipeline running under the street. More than 16,000 gallons of low-level gasoline poured from the eight-inch pipeline, which runs between Standard's 23 Second refinery and its Van Nuys distribution terminal. Eventually an automatic alarm system was activated, and the flow of gas shut off.

Territories Bill Gains
WASHINGTON, June 16 (AP)—The Senate passed today a bill authorizing an additional $10 million in loans to the Virgin Islands to bolster its depleted unemployment compensation fund. The bill, previously passed by the House, was amended in the Senate to extend to the Northern Mariana Islands the provisions of Social Security programs applicable to other territories.

Crane's Surprised At Disposal Order
The Crane Company said yesterday that it was "surprised" at the action of the Department of Justice in seeking a court order to compel Crane to dispose of 4.1 million shares of Anaconda common stock it had acquired in the last seven months.

On Tuesday, the Justice Department filed a civil suit in the Federal District Court in New York charging that Crane's acquisition of the Anaconda shares violated antitrust laws because it tended to lessen competition in the million-dollar industrial valve industry, in which both companies are active.

"We find ourselves at a loss to understand why the Government would take any action against Crane," Crane said yesterday, "since its stock interest in Anaconda was acquired in accordance with Federal Judge Kevin Duffy's consent order."

Crane was referring to a decision by Judge Duffy of the United States Federal Court for the Southern District of New York on Nov. 5, 1975, that brought an end to a suit of Crane v. Anaconda.

Crane Agency Sees
Crane has been many court battles since the energy agent in Congress gave a consent order in 1974. It was expected that the order would lead to a conservation program, but the order was overturned by a court. Crane is now fighting a court battle to get the order overturned.

Tall Ships to Create Tall Logistics Problem

Franklin D. Roosevelt Drive will remain open to cars. In Brooklyn, though no firm decision has been reached about the Belt Parkway, the authorities are considering closing westbound lanes from Croyse Avenue to 60th Street, and eastbound lanes from 69th Street to Ocean Parkway, to leave these stretches for viewers.

Traffic will move as usual on the George Washington Bridge, but the pedestrian lane, which probably will be closed. On the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge, connecting Brooklyn and Staten Island, there is no pedestrian bridge, and traffic will move as usual.

Fort Tryon Park, topped by the Cloisters in Upper Manhattan will be among the best spots in the city for public viewing.

Good View From Towers

Qn of the best views will be from the World Trade Center's 110-story twin towers. According to a tenant, tickets will be priced at the rate of 5 cents a restable foot to the building owned by the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey.

Tickets will be restricted to meet safety standards of one person per 120 square feet that are set by the Fire Safety Code. Thus an office with 1,000 square feet would be allocated five tickets at a total cost of $30. And a mile north of the twin towers, the Morton Street Pier will be open to spectators, although no other pier will be available on the 6th and 6th floors of the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center. In the Rainbow Room and the Rainbow Grill, for $12.50 you can lunch and drink grog and watch the ships all afternoon. $3.50 for children. Private suites will also be available by reservation in the Rainbow Room. For information call PL 7-9090.

Trains and buses will be operating on weekday schedules that Sunday, and only half-train will be charged. The Metropolitan Transportation Authority says its bus and subway services will "resemble rush-hour service."

Policemen on foot will be well-scattered throughout the festival area downtown. The Police Department is urging visitors who are in need of police assistance to seek out one of those foot patrolmen and not to call "911" which it says should be kept open for serious emergencies.

There will be 19 Red Cross stations in the area, as well as 18 disaster trucks, 29 station wagons and six tents manned by Red Cross volunteers.

Lost-Children Centers

The Greater New York Red Cross reports it will have 5,100 yards of bandages, 2,100 yards of adhesive tape, 18,650 square feet of special stick-on bandages, 6,000 aspirin tablets and all manner of first aid and toiletry items available. It will also provide 6,000 lollipops to have on hand in centers for lost children; that it will operate jointly with the police. Beekman Downtown Hospital, directly across Park Row from City Hall, will be open for that entire festival weekend. All of its leaves and holidays will be canceled, its staff increased and its ambulances at the ready for emergencies.

Portable toilet facilities will be scattered throughout the area and will be open from 8 A.M. when the July 4 festival opens with an ecumenical service in Battery Park to the Walt Disney-designed fireworks show around the base of the Statue of Liberty at 9 P.M.

Programs Available

The July 4 festival committee will set up 15 information booths, one at each subway entrance within the Lower Manhattan area. Programs will be sold at the booths for 50 cents each. The programs, 16-page booklets, with maps of the lower city, of the harbor, some Revolutionary-era history, a guide to Operation Sail and the International Review and the 22 all-day ethnic festivals in the area, have been printed and donated to the city's Bicentennial effort by Bowne and Company, printers. All proceeds from the sale will go to the festival committee to pay its debts.

More than 100 restaurants in the Lower Manhattan area, most of which normally close on Sundays, will remain open for the day and will attempt to serve food that can be in some way connected with history. In addition, each of the ethnic neighborhood festivals on the Lower Manhattan streets will sell traditional foods cooked on the spot. Efforts to have choice seats for Operation Sail and the International Naval Review are rapidly approaching a stampede. Managers of commercial buildings in the Wall Street area, those with views of the Lower Bay, are reportedly resisting efforts of tenants to open their offices for the day and invite parties of their friends.

Private dining clubs in the area are reported to be charging members $25 to $35 for viewing privileges—but lunch will be served as well. And people who live in river-view apartments on both sides of the Hudson River and along the Brooklyn and Staten Island waterfronts are being besieged by "friends" they thought they had forgotten.

There are several ways to obtain choice seats for Operation Sail.

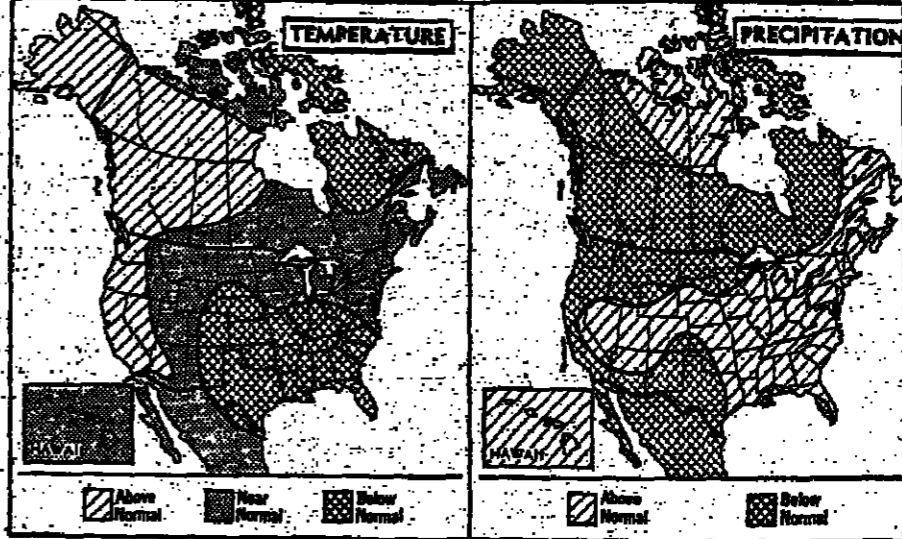

A limited number of pleasure boats will be permitted to anchor along the Operation Sail parade route, but mariners should check with the United States Coast Guard for approved locations. It is reported that most of the area's chartered fishing and pleasure boats have already been reserved for the day, but a check could be made with your local marina.

Leaders are lines (solid black) of equal barometric pressure (in inches); forming air-flow patterns.

Shaded areas indicate precipitation. Dashed lines show forecast afternoon maximum temperatures.

Isobars are lines (solid black) of equal barometric pressure (in inches); forming air-flow patterns. Weather centers use low-pressure systems, clockwise outward from high-pressure areas. Pressure systems usually move east.

Weather: Mid-June to Mid-July

These charts, based on information supplied by the National Weather Service, show for the next 30 days expected departures from normal temperatures and from normal precipitation. Normal temperatures for this period for five key cities are as follows: New York, 74.7; Chicago, 71.5; Denver, 70.4; San Francisco, 61.9; Anchorage, 57.

Festival of American Folklife Opens Its Bicentennial Version

WASHINGTON, June 15—The Festival of American Folklife, something of a summertime tradition here for the last decade, opened its Bicentennial version today. It is the longest, most expensive, and its organizers hope, the best one yet.

World champion loggers from Northwest and Pennsylvania, brandishing a two-handled saw, handily defeat a chain saw in a log-cutting race between man and machine. Charlie Sayles, a Greenwich Village street singer, sings from a nearby stage about "passing the time."

Further down the Mall begins the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial. Martin, Boyer and Arno, a Southern blues-swing band, play "Summertime" near the Reflecting Pool.

In the shade of a grove of trees, a Romanian choir from Detroit follows the lively circle step of folk dancers with the sad song of an immigrant alone in a foreign country. Beneath a tent nearby, Yemenite folk dancers step to an Israeli tune. The theme of the festival is tradition in song, dance, food and folklore, and the expected 15 million visitors will be encouraged not only to watch, but to participate as well.

Dissidents Win Concessions On Bicentennial Activities

PHILADELPHIA, June 15—A coalition of dissident organizations, meeting here for demonstrations on June 16, has won a split decision. One half of its demands are planned but far away from the city's scheduled Bicentennial activities.

The group, Rich Off Backs-July Fourth Coalition, said yesterday that it would demand that the Statue of Liberty be closed to the public, and that the city erect a tent at Fairmount Park and furl the flag at the "cultural-political" event.

The coalition went to the city after it refused to accede to its demands. It had demanded that it hold demonstrations on July 4.

$10 Million Pact Awarded

BRIDGEPORT, N. J., June 15—The National Oil & Gas Construction Company, a group of engineering and construction firms, has won a $10 million contract to build a pipeline from the northern New Jersey shore to the Pennsylvania border.

The pipeline will connect the two states and will be a major link in the energy network of the Northeast. It will be 15 miles long and will have a capacity of 1 million barrels a day.

Weather Reports and Forecast

Hazy, warm and humid conditions dominated the Northeast yesterday. Thunderstorms continued along a cold front from northern New England through the middle Mississippi Valley into the Texas Gulf Coast. Another area of thunderstorms was reported from southwestern Virginia into southern Florida. Sponsors Quit Afternoon Horror Movies national advertisers have withdrawn their commercial advertising from the Saturday and Sunday afternoon horror movie programs on KCOB-TV in Los Angeles in response to a "citizens' group" that has been scheduling programs during the hours accessible to children, as at 3 P.M. on weekends. The group, which was formed last week, said it had been told by the advertiser that the programs were not to be shown to children.

By LES BROWN

They were scheduled with "reckless irresponsibility for the welfare of the Los Angeles community," the group said.

The companies were advised in the letter that the consumer organization was formulating a publicity campaign that would emphasize the obvious fact that these programs could not exist without the financial underwriting that they received from advertisers.

Enclosed with the letter were summary descriptions of the more lurid and violent scenes in the horror films. One, a British production, "Tower of Terror," concerned the rape and strangulation of teen-aged girls. It was televised by KCOB-TV on May 9.

Richard Frank, vice president and general manager of KCOB-TV, denied the allegations of the consumer group, saying that the horror movies had been "edited down" to what is acceptable to the Los Angeles community.

"What we have," Mr. Frank said, "is one pressure group trying to make a programming decision by coercing our advertisers. What's going to stop another pressure group from telling NBC next week they want the news changed?"

In the last week, Procter & Gamble, Gillette, the Kinney Shoe Corporation, Jack in the Box and Albertson's Food Centers advised the consumerist organization that they had ceased advertising in the horror movies.

Agency Head Comments

"We did not threaten the advertisers with a product boycott," said Frank Orme, executive vice president of the organization. "We tried only to appeal to their common sense and integrity, and it's gratifying that we heard from five of them immediately in such a friendly and sympathetic manner."

William Salatch, president of the group, said in his reply to Mr. Orme that the placement of Gillette product advertisements in horror shows was a violation of the company's established policy.

New 'Magazine' Format On 'ABC News Closeup'

By JOHN LEONARD

It isn't clear from the publicity materials devoted to tonight's "ABC News Closeup" (Channel 7, 10 P.M.) whether the new "magazine" format is a one-shot, a trial balloon or a major surgery. "Closeup," under the auspices of Av Westin, was a deservedly Erasmian hour of investigative reporting on a single topic, usually a malfeasance. Mr. Westin no longer associates with ABC "Closeup" this evening, a series of snippets, a sort of "60 Minutes" with John V. Lindsay standing in for Mike Wallace, Morley Safer and Dan Rafter.

Mr. Lindsay is to TV what John Ehrlichman is to fiction: much better than we had any right to expect. As a pinch-host recently on ABC's "A.M. America," he has been very engaging indeed. He is asked tonight to be the verbal bridge between segments that spring from the bias against women athletes at our colleges, to corporate bribery of foreign governments, to Ian Smith explaining how unredeemable black Africans are for a truly democratic Rhodesia (and how, ungrateful, fool, "when one considers how much the white people have done for this part of the world"), to a film-essay on Mikhail Baryshnikov, the Russian ballet "superstar" who left Lenin-grad for Twyla Tharp.

These segments are interesting; just as Life magazine used to be. That Mr. Smith, the Prime Minister of Rhodesia, "tells us that (1) Henry Kissinger may be 'telling us to women' and (2) Mr. Smith would not object to direct American involvement on his side providing the money is interesting." What it is really new about it is a woman producer, Pamela Hill, under the auspices of a woman's news vice president and director of television documentaries, Marlene Sanders. That, too, is worthy, but where have you gone, Av Westin?

Jerome Bess, President of Sawdon & Bess, the Advertising Agency for Kinney Shoe Corporation and Woolworth-Woolco, which had also occasionally advertised in the horror movies, said his media buyers had been instructed not to purchase spots for any clients in programs that depend on violence and shock for their audience appeal.

It is, moreover, headlinism plus Barnum and Bailey. The entire segment on corporate bribery seems to be a parody of "All the President's Men," with Jack Kent Cooke and a cast of familiar names like Bill Boardman, host, Gypsy fortune tellers, domestic traffic-jams, headless factotums with an irrelevant panning to their briefcases or their feet. Why must the camera twice close in on James Atkins's hands as they fidget and clench, while ignoring the hands of Senators Frank Church and William Proxmire? Do we need the visual echoes, the filmic "wake," of ballet motion, all those freeze-frames, the Muzak, the emotional neon signs? "ABC News Closeup" this evening looks a little too much like "ABC's Wide World of Entertainment," what a really new about it is a woman producer, Pamela Hill, under the auspices of a woman's news vice president and director of television documentaries, Marlene Sanders. That, too, is worthy, but where have you gone, Av Westin?

New York State Act Eases Way To Consumer-Fraud Conviction

By FRANCES CERRA
 Governor Carey has signed James Lack, Suffolk County Commissioner of Consumer Affairs and another drafter of the bill, said that this resulted in "judicious" situations. A good example, he said was a case three days ago in which a charity collected $1.50 million from about 200,000 people supposedly to help the handicapped.

"Because of all the investigative time involved, you would not be able to go above 150 or 200 cases a year," said Mr. Lack, a former assistant district attorney in Suffolk.

The new law makes a scheme to defraud 10 or more persons a Class E felony, which carries a prison term of up to four years, or a fine for a corporation of up to $10,000, with the possibility of a further fine equal to twice the amount taken from consumers. The law will take effect Jan. 1, 1971.

"Before this law was passed, the risk of prosecution for fraud in these cases could have been considered an acceptable risk of doing business," Mr. Lack asserted.

Two Jars of Poison Stolen

Two jars of extremely poisonous material were stolen from the automobile of a Bronx exterminator early today. The auto, parked at 184th Street and Creston Avenue, was broken into between 2 A.M. and 7 A.M. One jar contained a rat poison for which there is no known antidote if it is eaten. The other contained a substance that can be absorbed through the skin. Anyone with information about the jars was urged to call the police.

TEAMSTERS' HEAD WINS RE-ELECTION

Fitzsimmons Gets Ovation—Delegates Also Support Union's Top Officers

By LEE DEMBART Special to The New York Times LAS VEGAS, Nev., June 16—Frank E. Fitzsimmons was unanimously re-elected today to a five-year term as president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and all of the union's international officers were also re-elected. Mr. Fitzsimmons, whose salary was increased yesterday by 25 percent to $156,250 a year, received several ovations from the 2,300 delegates to the teamsters convention. But the delegates gave their greatest applause to William Presser of Cleveland, who was re-elected as a vice president and member of the union's executive board. Mr. Presser, who was paid $128,448 in 1974 by the union, has been jailed twice for obstruction of justice and contempt of Congress. In 1971, he pleaded guilty of accepting money from employers, but was not sent to jail. "Mirror to His Future" The delegate who placed Mr. Presser's name in nomination hailed him and assured the convention that "this man's past is a mirror to his future." Salvatore Provenzano of Union City, N.J., the younger brother of Anthony Provenzano, was also re-elected as a vice president of the union. Salvatore Provenzano, who was paid $34,848 by the teamsters in 1974, was indicted in 1972 on charges of conspiracy to counterfeit currency and food and postage stamps, but the charges were later dropped. Also re-elected as a vice president was Roy Williams of Kansas City, who is awaiting trial on a 1974 charge that he made false entries on reports filed with the Government. In 1972, Mr. Williams was acquitted of a charge of embezzlement of union funds. In 1974, he was paid $91,116 by the union. At a news conference last Sunday, Mr. Fitzsimmons insisted, "There hasn't been any conviction or indictments because of handling the business of this international union."

A Minor Surprise The one minor surprise in the election of officers was the re-election of Harold J. Gibbons of St. Louis as a vice president. Mr. Gibbons, who was one of the early opponents of the Vietnam war among American labor leaders, was long considered to be the teamsters' liberal intellectual. He was executive assistant to James R. Hoffa when Mr. Hoffa was president of the union, and for a while was thought to be Mr. Hoffa's heir apparent. But when Mr. Fitzsimmons assumed power in 1967 after Mr. Hoffa went to prison, Mr. Gibbons' star fell. He was removed as director of the union's central conference, and as recently as last year it was assumed that Mr. Fitzsimmons would remove him as a vice president at this convention. Joseph Trerotola of New York, the president of Joint Council 16, which covers New York City, was also re-elected a teamster vice president. In 1974, Mr. Trerotola was paid $86,906 by the union. The convention also expanded the executive board by one member and created a 16th vice president, electing John H. Cleveland of Washington to the post. Mr. Cleveland is the first black vice president in the union's history. The data on teamsters salaries were contained in a report issued three weeks ago by Fred, a watchdog group. At a news conference this afternoon, Arthur L. Fox Jr., executive director of Fred, called the convention "a rubber stamp circus" that perpetuated a "cruel political fraud" on teamster members. Among other things, Mr. Fox cited changes in the union's constitution that, he said, would make it impossible for insurgents to challenge the teamster leadership in the future. He pointed to another constitutional change that he said would prevent members from accusing union officers of misconduct unless the charges were filed within 12 months of the alleged incident. Meanwhile, there was a reaction in Congress to the appearance here of Secretary of Labor W. J. Usery Jr., who praised the teamster leaders on Monday but insisted that his remarks would not get in the way of his department's investigation of the union's central states pension fund. Representative J. J. Pickle, Democrat of Texas, who is a member of a subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee overseeing enforcement of the Federal pension law, said today: "When the investigators bogman breaks bread with and gives a toast to the targets of an investigation, my common sense tells me such action hurts the morale of the investigators. The remarks at the teamsters convention are not only untimely but regrettable."
